Shocking Parricide

[illegible] June 28.—John [illegible] this morning while [illegible]

Harvard Wins the Race

New London, Conn., June [illegible] The [illegible] Yale boat [illegible] twelve lengths in [illegible] New London, June [illegible] been pulled Harvard [illegible] went to the front [illegible] a minute and Yale [illegible] their thing at [illegible] to admirers [illegible] quarters of a mile [illegible] stroke was from three to [illegible] pulling a uniform stroke [illegible] making 32 and very [illegible] every yard [illegible] was three lengths behind [illegible] pulling even thirty four [illegible] mile point was [illegible] her lead having [illegible] Yale was now hopelessly [illegible] six lengths and still pulling [illegible] On the last part of the last mile the [illegible] crew made a spurt and [illegible] that lead passing the line [illegible] lengths ahead. Yale pluckily pulled through the race until [illegible] time is Harvard [illegible] Both crews were heartily cheered by [illegible] on the river [illegible] steam whistles sounded. The Yale [illegible] much chagrined because of the [illegible] disastrous defeat of their representatives [illegible] stroke who handicapped them [illegible]

Monmouth Centennial

Freehold, N. J., June [illegible] The centennial [illegible] of the battle of Monmouth [illegible] of the corner stone for a [illegible] the names of New Jersey soldiers [illegible] the revolutionary war [illegible] were the occasion for a grand [illegible] and military procession.

Making and Selling Cigars

[illegible] June 28.—In the [illegible] Judge Giles decided a test [illegible] the order of the U. S. commissioner [illegible] internal revenue requiring [illegible] their factories and [illegible] partition. The decision [illegible] commissioner could not thus [illegible] evidently gives manufacturers [illegible]

Indians Attack a Marshal's Posse

[illegible] Ind. T., June 28.—Deputy [illegible] Marshal Mershon of Fort Smith [illegible] after two Indians who were [illegible] numbers of others on the [illegible] miles from here. The Indians [illegible] sang the war song and attacked the [illegible] posse with pistols and bowie [illegible] Quite a lively fight ensued [illegible] one of the Indians was killed. It is [illegible] affair may cause the Comanches upon the war path.

New Orleans, June 28.—Representatives Reed of the Potter sub-committee [illegible] arrived. Representative [illegible] at Cincinnati. He telegraphs he [illegible] Sunday morning.

Mexican Hanged

Corpus Christi, June 28.—[illegible] Mexican, was hanged to-day for the murder [illegible] in December 1870. The [illegible] was for the purpose of robbing. He [illegible] his victim to death with a [illegible] cut him to pieces with a knife. He [illegible] innocence.

An Indian Hanged.

Boise City, June 28.—Tambiago, the Bannock murderer of Rhodan, was hanged in the [illegible] penitentiary near this city [illegible] afternoon. He begged for the respite of [illegible] day, saying he would willingly die if [illegible] have one more sleep. He said that [illegible] and some of the Indians would [illegible] see him if he could live another day. [illegible] the scaffold he bore himself as a stoic [illegible] seemed only to regret that he was compelled to go alone and without seeing [illegible] of his people. His brother, or one who [illegible] to be such, is in the penitentiary [illegible] a sentence of 10 years' confinement for [illegible] the three teamsters near Fort Hall [illegible] This Indian yesterday attempted to commit suicide. He opened a vein of [illegible] and had lost nearly blood enough to [illegible] death, but he was discovered in time [illegible] Tambiago had asked as a special favor that if the one must die that the other be permitted to die with him. As this could not [illegible] he made up his mind to go off [illegible] Some apprehension was [illegible] yesterday that there might be an attempt by some prowling bands of Indians to rescue Tambiago, but there was no [illegible] the presence of the Indians any [illegible] near.

The Dead Queen of Spain.

Madrid, June 28.—King Alfonso has received telegrams of condolence from all the European courts. All the shops were closed [illegible] Theaters have ceased playing [illegible] on exchange is suspended. It is [illegible] that the body of the queen will [illegible] in state three days. The funeral will take place probably next week.

[illegible] states that the Pope will celebrate [illegible] mass of requiem in Cistine chapel for [illegible] repose of the soul of the queen of Spain.

WEST INDIES.

Cost of Quelling the Cuban Revolt

New York, June 28.—A letter from Havana says the campaign of the Spaniards against the Cubans without any battle [illegible] 80,000 men and the island [illegible] [illegible] Five steamers are reported on [illegible] from Spain to carry home the troops. [illegible] Campos has begun a reduction of government expenses on the island by giving [illegible] half his official salary as captain [illegible]

Too Much Silver

[From the Philadelphia Press.]

Silver is getting to be an intolerable nuisance. [illegible] are loaded down with it, and do not know how to get rid of it, and it accumulates upon them; but they cannot pay duties with it nor force it on the government, nor [illegible] private accounts with it. They are [illegible] with it, factories and banks are [illegible] with it. As for the Bland silver, it [illegible] in the United States vaults and [illegible] certificates will be issued for it. This is [illegible] expansion. The certificates will [illegible] at a rate above greenbacks because [illegible] can be paid in them, and yet they can [illegible] bought with fractional silver and trade [illegible] Here is a pretty outcome of Democratic legislation. No one is thankful yet for [illegible] doings of this congress. If congress does not get home in a few days it will [illegible] to be overwhelmed with petitions to [illegible] its silver coinage bills.

The contract for building the depot at [illegible] the Sheridan, Grand Ronde and [illegible] has been let to A Schultz and [illegible] lumber is now being sawed on the Lucki-[illegible]

THE POTTER INVESTIGATION.

[illegible]

They did everything with the exception [illegible] with the Democrats and after two [illegible] days he went back [illegible] [illegible] they agreed to go witness would [illegible] regard to Archer precinct [illegible] in preparing [illegible] actually [illegible] and my remember [illegible] Republican [illegible] and returned [illegible] [illegible] thoroughly impossible that 294 votes had been [illegible] canvassing board. I wish to say that McLin [illegible] that he did not desire to bring [illegible] to McLin that all I want [illegible] to them if the state had honestly [illegible] Tilden it was their duty so to declare, but if [illegible] nothing but what honest men could do [illegible] the state had gone for Hayes rather than [illegible] the vote in Florida had been cast McLin came to me greatly depressed and said he did not know [illegible] would become of him; that he had so [illegible] the Democrats that he could [illegible] longer live in Florida in peace [illegible] almost in despair [illegible] McLin you have done your duty [illegible] fairly as I think, and I shall take great [illegible] Hayes [illegible] president and I will take pleasure [illegible] and family.

[illegible] Dr. Cowgill [illegible] greatly impressed with his honesty [illegible] [illegible] to the president [illegible] I am sorry they were not appointed [illegible] administration [illegible] McLin [illegible] talk with him on any subject until the [illegible] had been cast. They [illegible] these gentlemen as the special friends of [illegible] Hayes.

One of the letters from McLin to Noyes [illegible] already made public deprecating the fact that the Democrats whose frauds in Florida were even greater than was first suspected were about to reap the fruits of their victory [illegible] presidency [illegible] Democrats [illegible] fraud [illegible] proved and Republican honesty at the polls shown. It declares that teachers and [illegible] say the writer [illegible] the gloomy [illegible] Republican [illegible] request that Noyes will speak a word to [illegible] favorable to the writer's appointment as [illegible] district judge [illegible] adding that he asks this as a favor, and not on account of political canvass regarding which he only performed his duty.

The second letter [illegible] Tallahassee [illegible] congratulates the country [illegible] predicting [illegible] a president [illegible] prospect even though [illegible]

Witness continues their friends [illegible] that with a fair and free election Florida would have given 7,000 Republican majority. He [illegible] himself that the face of the returns was correct [illegible] and then that the returns represented the vote [illegible] the state. Gov. Stearns never told witness that [illegible] Hayes [illegible] regardless of the face of the returns. Witness positively denied telling John F. Coyle that he had authority to represent Hayes. He didn't know [illegible] from Adam. He didn't tell him that for it would be a lie and he didn't tell lies.

Gen. Lew Wallace testified [illegible] New Orleans and then by request of Noyes to Tallahassee; was with Kasson and [illegible] almost the entire time and never saw or heard McLin and Noyes in conversation. Believed Noyes honestly thought the state had gone for Hayes. Witness didn't understand that Dennis refused to testify because it would show Republican frauds, but thought he was unwilling to prejudice his personal safety. Both Zach Chandler and the president asked him to go to Florida after the canvass to attend certain suits in the courts. Witness told McLin so, but after his first visit never intimated such a thing because the president had not then asked him to go. He had told McLin that Hayes would take as good care of his friends as Tilden could provided he was elected. He didn't regard that as a corrupt proposition. He respected McLin and expected him to do his duty. That was the only time he made such an observation previous to the count. He said similar things frequently thereafter.

Witness pronounced the statement made by Gen. Cocke before the Florida sub committee to the effect that he, witness, Cowgill, Gov. Stearns and [illegible]

SOUTH CAROLINA

[illegible]

[illegible] South politics are an absorbing interest [illegible] they divide [illegible] and each faction [illegible] for mayor or sheriff or what not each candidate every [illegible] his interest [illegible] who help him [illegible] The [illegible] by the [illegible] passed by the [illegible] for his vote on the silver bill was only the same [illegible] the Republican party [illegible] will require [illegible] intelligence, honesty [illegible] will sooner or later go to the wall. As to South Carolina I can only say that one of the ablest Republican lawyers in the state, a white man unsuspected of corruption, said to me: "This is a Republican state and to prove it such we need only to bring out our voters. [illegible] this we do not need troops but that half a dozen well known northern Republicans should canvass the state just as if it were a northern state. The colored voters [illegible] to know that the party at the north has [illegible] With this and a perfectly clean list of [illegible] we can carry the legislature [illegible] against Hampton." But [illegible] these meetings be broken up? [illegible] he said. "They will be [illegible] those held by speakers from other states. It will fulminate [illegible]" And his remark was afterward indorsed by others [illegible] educated colored leaders in the state [illegible] the withdrawal of the troops by President Hayes [illegible] withdrawn two years earlier. That would have put us on [illegible] to [illegible] and made it easier to save the Republican party. But it can still be saved.

A Very Poor Result.

[From the New York Times.]

As for the investigation, the likelihood seems to be that it will not grow in importance. The only sufferers thus far, on the Republican side are Messrs. Sherman and Matthews, neither of whom is essential to the future of the party. On the side of the Democrats there is evidently a good deal of disappointment. They would not have undertaken the hunt had their expectations been limited to casting suspicion upon a secretary of the treasury and rendering the Republican party more ashamed than ever of the Ohio senator. Yet this is all the investigating committee has accomplished in regard to Louisiana, while in regard to Florida little that is material has been added to the McLin confession.

The president will attend the celebration of the Wyoming centennial near Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, the 3d and 4th of July.

At [illegible] the bodies of thirteen horses were found in a corral where the savages had shot them. A majority of the Indians are armed with breech loaders and the whites who saw them in council and escaped being butchered by the stratagem of a friendly Piute chief say they have plenty of ammunition.

Gail Hamilton's Last Hit at Carl Schurz

This German chord has been overworked. By constant twanging it has brought Mr. Schurz into undue prominence in this country, a prominence which, without its aid, would never have been secured; a prominence which is a perpetual surprise as well as an essential injustice to the more modest and more able of his own countrymen. "What kind of a man would Schurz have been had he remained in Prussia?" ruefully asked an American of Prince Bismarck, while the Missouri senator was engaged in draping his American toga before the effete monarchies of Europe. "Ah!" said the saturnine prince, fresh from his courtesy to this representative of the senate of the great republic, "Mr. Schurz has admirable talents for the piano and Germany has admirable schools for music!"

The distance from [illegible] the time at which [illegible] best [illegible] and do not gather [illegible] kinds [illegible]

The art of packing a box of apples [illegible] so as to make it show at its best is only attainable by long practice. Water vs. Rail Transportation.

In illustrating the advantage and economy of water transportation over rail nothing more forcible and pointed than the following from a recent issue of the Cincinnati Commercial can be offered:

The tow-boat Josh Williams is on her way to New Orleans with a tow of thirty two barges containing six hundred thousand bushels (seventy six pounds to the bushel) of coal, exclusive of her own fuel, being the largest tow ever taken to New Orleans or anywhere else in the world. Her freight bill at three cents per bushel amounts to $18,000. It would take eighteen hundred cars of three hundred and thirty three bushels to the car (which is an overload for a car) to transport this amount of coal. At $10 per ton, or $100 per car, which would be a fair price for the distance by rail, the freight bill would amount to $180,000, or $162,000 more by rail than by river. The tow will be taken from Pittsburgh to Orleans in fourteen days. It would require one hundred trains of eighteen cars to the train to transport this one tow of sixteen thousand bushels of coal, and even if it made the usual speed of fast freight lines it would take one whole summer to put it through by rail.

Bob Ingersoll on Stanley Matthews.

Bill Chandler says Bob Ingersoll says of the expansion Stanley Matthews made in open senate that it reminds him of a traveler who was going through a country which had been infested with a noted desperado whose name was Terror. The traveler was on his journey on horseback when he fell in with a fellow-traveler. After they had jogged on a mile or two together the traveler said to his companion: "I hope we will not be molested by this celebrated thief who has plundered hereabouts, for I have a large amount of money and have no weapon." [illegible] some further progress the two alighted at a spring to drink. As the traveler stooped to dip up the water his companion pounced upon him demanding his money or his life, adding "I am the thief you have dreaded meeting." Strangely enough the traveler showed fight and it was only after a tough tussle that he was overcome. "Now give me your money," demanded the thief. "I have no money," said the traveler. "What in hell made you fight then?" so cried the thief. "Well," replied the traveler, "I told you I had a good deal of money and no weapon, and I hated to be caught in such a story."

Relatives who Talk too Much

From the Philadelphia Record

No public man in America is blessed with a more amusing set of relatives than General Grant. While his venerable father survived he contributed to the good feeling of the country by a great flow of reminiscence both oral and written. Now that the good man is gone, Brother Orvil and the younger Grants seem determined to make up for his loss. When General Grant speaks for himself he generally manages to acquit himself with sense and credit. But the words of his relatives are not so well chosen.

A dispatch from Washington says the order will be enforced which prohibits persons holding federal positions from taking part in caucuses, primary meetings and conventions. Suppose it had been enforced in Oregon lately, how it would have disarranged a certain programme.

English jackets are the popular wrap for traveling costumes. They have deep square pockets and a heavy braid for binding. Other traveling cloaks are remarkably long and are made especially plain.

PORTER ROCKWELL

THE [illegible]

From [illegible]

On Sunday [illegible] there was great [illegible] at [illegible] that the [illegible] M[illegible] [illegible] the Colorado [illegible] [illegible] power [illegible] place des[illegible] little [illegible] D D [illegible] it was [illegible] Death [illegible] was [illegible] failed [illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] parts of the territory [illegible] the event

[illegible]

Rockwell was at the theater on Saturday evening in a state of intoxication. When the play was over he spent several hours at [illegible] and in the saloons. The hostler in charge of the Colorado stables says it was between 12 and 1 o'clock that night before Porter came in and got to bed. On Sunday morning he complained of being cold and soon afterwards was seized with a fit of vomiting. He kept his bed all day and talked quite freely though never intimated that he [illegible] thought [illegible] he had come. About [illegible] he was seized with another fit of nausea [illegible] [illegible] and a few minutes before he died he insisted on getting up. He sat on the side of his bunk and put on his shoes, then he fell back and almost instantly expired. Thus the gallows was cheated of one of the [illegible] and [illegible] that ever [illegible] or plundered a traveler.

HE WAS UNDER INDICTMENT

In the first judicial district for participation in the Aiken murder and was to be tried at the next September term of Judge Emerson's court. There was strong evidence against Rockwell but it is extremely doubtful whether a jury could have been empaneled that would convict him on proof of the crime [illegible] Although Porter held many dangerous secrets of the Mormon priesthood [illegible] [illegible] the kingdom of [illegible] by allowing John D. Lee to be executed learned a lesson which convinced the [illegible] [illegible] of Mormondom that it would be far safer to stand by Rockwell in his trial than to bear the [illegible] of the exposures he could and would have made had they sacrificed him as they did Lee. Hence many a Mormon heart will rejoice at the sudden demise of this great criminal.

AN EXTREMELY IGNORANT MAN

Porter Rockwell was an extremely ignorant illiterate man being unable to write his own name and was as superstitious as a savage. He was a firm believer in ghosts, witches, evil spirits and spooks as well as in the revelations of Joe Smith and the divinity of the utterances of the Mormon high priests and prophets. It was he who shot Governor Boggs in the early troubles of the Mormon Church in Missouri for which service to the cause Joe Smith declared him the Samson of the Church and promised him in the name of the Lord that if he would never allow his hair and whiskers to be cut the bullet of his enemies should be turned aside and wicked [illegible] men should never prevail against him. [illegible] therefore always wore his hair long and a full beard both of which however were thin as well as gray. He wore his hair in two braids tied up with two small ribbons across the back of his head on a line with his ears.

It is estimated that he participated in at least

A HUNDRED MURDERS

for the church none of which he ever divulged. He used to own the Dunyan ranch at the point of the mountain south of this city and a short distance from that point on the road to Camp Floyd there is a deep well where there was in early days a stage station. This place he firmly believed to be haunted by evil spirits who delighted in bringing trouble upon him or his horses every time he passed. He used to tell that on one occasion when he was passing this well with a band of wild mustangs some thirty of his animals fell down in the road sick. He directed his man to split the tail of each sick horse, put some of the blood of each on a wisp of straw which he set fire to and burned. This rite the horses immediately recovered and he went on his way rejoicing.

BROKE THE SPELL OF THE WITCHES

A few weeks ago while bringing a band of colts by that well one of the best in the lot suddenly stopped and refused to be driven or led a single step. After two days effort by the hired man the horse moved a few feet and it was then discovered that one of his fore legs was broken. As an explanation of all this Porter told his hired men that in the old well five or six men had been buried years ago and hence it was only necessity that ever compelled him to pass that way. Rockwell also had a decided objection to sleeping in the dark and during the few months he stopped at the Colorado stables he never permitted the lamp to be turned out. Not unfrequently too he would insist on sleeping with the hostler as if afraid of shadows. When Joe Smith in Missouri first organized

THE HOSTS OF ISRAEL

Rockwell was made the chief of the Danite band which branch of the aforesaid hosts was charged with the work of secretly assassinating the enemies of Smith and the church. This organization had its signs, the principal [illegible] the palm against the cheek in such a manner that the right ear protruded between the index and middle fingers. With this Porter Rockwell and his band could do their bloody work in a crowd without danger of colliding with each other.

After the death of Smith Rockwell transferred his allegiance to Brigham Young whom he served as devoutly as he did the original prophet doing the priesthood's work of assassination when ordered as cheerfully as other elders of the church went on proselyting missions when called by the Mormon authorities.

TO MURDER FOR THE CHURCH

Was his calling in the Kingdom of God; it was his religion. It is but justice to him however to say that

HE NEVER WAS A POLYGAMIST

Though he had been married three times and was the father of three families of boys and girls.

In stature Porter Rockwell was small but heavy and compactly built. His eyes were little blue peepers, his features small and his florid face always wore an expression of mingled disgust and contempt as if something were constantly offending his olfactory nerves. He usually dressed in Brigham's homespun and wore a faded felt hat turned up at both sides.

A Little Story of a Simple Boy

[From the Cincinnati Commercial]

"Slamey" was a little like the boy who took the colt to water and finding the animal fractious when led by the halter concluded that a bridle upon him would do him good and quiet his nerves and in order to put on the bridle, attached the halter strap to his own leg. Sometime afterward when slowly convalescing he related that the colt had made but one jump after the attachment of the halter before he saw that he had made a mistake.

SAFETY OUT OF DISASTER

[From Macmillan's Magazine

A battle lost is [illegible] has said a famous French [illegible] fulfills the apparent anomaly [illegible] in the complete overthrow of the [illegible] Kingdom in 1806 that we must look [illegible] for the final defeat of Napoleon in 1815 [illegible] also for the preponderance [illegible] many to-day among the nations of [illegible] It has been the habit of many writers [illegible] speak of Scharnhorst as the [illegible] formers in the Prussian army which [illegible] after the peace of Tilsit [illegible] after not the author [illegible] was the genius of Stein that first [illegible] great fact that it was necessary [illegible] work of the French Revolution [illegible] revolution could itself be [illegible] Prussian peasant planted on the [illegible] soil might yet defeat the French peasant [illegible] whom the revolution had [illegible] work of Stein deserves more than a passing notice. Called to that hard task the reconstruction of a fabric ruined by the [illegible] partly of others Stein began in 1807 the work of giving his country a fresh existence Two facts were of transcendent help to him [illegible] the defeat suffered by his country had been sufficiently overwhelming the disaster had been vast enough to still into almost complete silence the voice of privilege to still even the utterance of faction Second his early training had given him a keen insight into the working of the land the mineral resources, the revenue, and the whole social system of his country He had passed the prime of life, but his years had run not in the groove of a profession not under the influence of the traditions of a department or the teachings of a social caste but along the broader lines of thought and amid conditions of life from which alone those principles enabling all classes and centering in the welfare of the state can be evolved Four days after his hand had grasped the helm of the shattered vessel, his ordinances were proclaimed. Serfdom in every shape ceased peasants and burghers were given the right to become owners of land the rights of municipalities were secured to them, and large portions of the vast estates of the nobles were divided among the peasants Stein soon after driven into exile, left to other hands the completion of this great work It was completed The foundations of the present military system in Germany were laid deep by Scharnhorst in the land policy of Stein and quickly catching root, there arose from that fruitful soil a tree destined to overshadow the whole continent of Europe No nation felt so bitterly as Prussia the power of Napoleon in no country was defeat brought so thoroughly home to prince, peer and serf and in no country did the policy following on defeat result so completely in brilliant triumph Truly was [illegible] lost, Prussian progress gained But many years had to pass ere another nation learned the great secret that the cradle of an army is the cottage of the peasant Again the lesson was learned in the dark hours of defeat. With Sebastopol fell the serfdom of Russia, and to-day ere half a generation has passed, Europe beholds, in mingled admiration and terror, the free peasants of the north moving with a power which no obstacle of man or mountain could oppose up to the long coveted prize of Constantinople.

SMART MEN

THE NONSENSE ABOUT INTEMPERANCE IN MEN OF GENIUS

[From the N Y Times]

We read every few days in our exchanges that some man has died from intemperance who was unusually capable in his particular line, and would have done something remarkable but for his unfortunate habit This sort of sentiment is so common that one might believe that clever men have a natural tendency to dissipation Such an opinion in fact has been prevalent and is still prevalent to a moderate extent, but it is apt to be erroneous. It is no longer the fashion for genius to be profligate, wildly eccentric lawless. Genius nowadays is regulated by common sense—indeed, common sense is the foundation of real genius—understands cause and effect, is apprehensive and takes note of all facts; adapts means to ends in a word, clear-headed, many sided, practical The old notions of genius largely date from the Byron mania Because Byron wrote strong beautiful, often licentious poetry and got very drunk from time to time he had many imitators so far as drunkenness was concerned, and the crop has not yet been quite gathered. The imitators did nothing like Childe Harold or Manfred or the Giaour to be sure, but they drank more gin than their author, therefore in their view they were more than half as gifted as he They forgot that when he wrote his best things he was entirely sober, and when they did their worst things, they were, no doubt entirely tipsy It was a mistake. Really clever men seldom drink to excess If not restrained by moral they were by prudential considerations They knew that they can't afford it that drunkenness is no sense indemnifying When you see a man habitually intoxicated be he mechanic, accountant, artist, journalist or author, you can safely conclude that so far from being a master of his calling he is a tyro, if not a bungler Dissipated fellows very frequently get a name for proficiency and skill from the mere fact of their dissipation It is the world's way of distributing justice. It is willing to admit that a man is intellectually capable, when it is palpable that he is morally disqualified Anyone may acquire reputation for capacity by showing that he is chronically in a condition not to exercise his capacity Whether reputation is worth having at that price may be a question but all sensible persons will decide it in the negative.

The Mound Builders.

[From the New York Tribune]

Twenty five members of the Kansas Academy of Science recently made an exploration of the ancient mounds in Clay county Mo Three mounds were selected and opened Two of them contained vaults seven to eight feet square, with stone walls three feet and a half high. In one instance only was an entire skeleton found regularly lying on the back at the bottom of the vault Most of the bodies had occupied sitting postures One skeleton measured five feet eight inches and the bones of another indicated a hight of six feet two inches Eleven skulls were found which indicated a type of men much superior intellectually to the present race of Indians No pottery was found, and the only weapon discovered was a flint spear head six inches long. Prof. Mudge, of Topeka, who accompanied the exploring party, is of opinion that the mound builders belonged to a very numerous race of people which once occupied the country between the Allegheny mountains and the Missouri river, and the lakes and Northern Georgia and Alabama He thinks that the Toltec race which was afterwards discovered with the Aztecs in Old Mexico, once occupied the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri valleys, and that they reached an advanced state of civilization before they migrated to Mexico He has found the pottery made by this extinct race of people upon the Kansas prairies at least two hundred miles west of the Missouri river but he has never [illegible] mounds or remains of mounds west of that point

[illegible] Beveraux Blake said of Judge Hilton that [illegible] insulted a whole nationality [illegible] whole sex

The sermon of the best preacher in the world will not make as much impression upon a congregation as the sudden pattering of rain upon the window panes of a church containing two hundred new spring bonnets

It takes a drug clerk of broad judgment and liberal views and a calm statesman-like control of his features to know how to give a citizen the right kind of syrup in his soda water when the citizen's wife says she will take the same as her husband

An old darkey was endeavoring to explain his unfortunate condition You see remarked Sambo it was in this way as far as I can remember First my fadder died den my mudder married agin and den my mudder died and den my fadder married agin and somehow I doesn't seem to hav no parents at all nor no home no nuffin

A story is current that one of our [illegible] ladies while at home managed to be invited to a court ball and while there was approached by crown prince—now king—Humbert who addressed her some polite speech She did not rise as is etiquette but pointed with her fan to a vacant chair near and said You must be tired prince won't you sit down and rest your trotters awhile [illegible] the last court ball she attended

Small Farms Pay.

[From the Sacramento Bee

We are constantly told that small farms will not pay But we know of a farmer within 12 miles of Sacramento who owns 160 acres and who on that land supports a family of seven and puts in bank every year $1 000 as clear profit He raises chickens turkeys and vegetables and sows much of his land in wheat and buckwheat and oats for poultry feed The chickens are cared for by the young children and a dog herds the turkeys This man has a good wagon and several horses and lives as comfortably as any rancher who owns 40 000 acres Besides he is able to care for the needs and does it

SATURDAY MORNING JUNE 29 1878

[illegible] OF PORTLAND

For twenty five years there have been [illegible] that Portland could not maintain its pre-eminence as the commercial center of the northwest. [illegible] to the fashion to [illegible] rival towns. [illegible] many of them were [illegible] and never got beyond the stage of a rude [illegible] on paper [illegible] cry to try now [illegible] outside [illegible] within Portland [illegible] which [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] as to the [illegible] of the city [illegible] not see what there was to establish [illegible] fixed and [illegible] its position [illegible] the country [illegible] more [illegible] its business [illegible] as [illegible] the [illegible] country [illegible] functions as the country [illegible] It holds a position of [illegible] to the country [illegible] At an early time [illegible] circumstance favored Portland and [illegible] own wealth and the position it has [illegible] will if seconded by proper enterprise not only support the pre-eminence it has attained but will give it in future an ascendancy relatively greater still. Portland grew at first as the city of the Willamette valley. But the rapid increase of population in the country east of the Cascades with the great trade springing up in that section introduces a new factor. The last croakings heard about Portland are to the effect that the trade of the great country of the upper Columbia will eventually go across the mountains by rail to Puget Sound and [illegible] will be done.

Do people who indulge these [illegible] ings realize what a country this is? Have they any conception whatever of its great future? There are those now living who will see a population of three millions, perhaps more, within the territory now embraced in Oregon, Washington territory and Idaho. Of [illegible] a majority will be in the country east of the Cascade mountains. There is a natural line of connection between the two great sections. Nature has made it the easy route. The pass through which the Columbia river forces its way is the only place where for hundreds and even thousands of miles the great barrier formed by the western mountain chain is broken. Here is not only a natural pass for railroads, but the great river is [illegible] one of the largest on the continent whose navigation which may be made uninterrupted for above five hundred miles from the sea at less outlay than improvement of inferior streams in several parts of the country has cost the government. Through this natural pass the commerce of the country by river and rail will take its way. For though eventually a railroad will be built across the mountains by a northern route to Puget Sound and no doubt will find plenty of business to do, yet the great bulk of the traffic will take the easier and cheaper route. Even though such a road be built to Puget Sound the business by the route of the Columbia river would continue to grow, because it would be augmented beyond all present calculation by the continued growth of the country in population, production and wealth. The advantages offered by the river route arising from the acknowledged cheapness of water transportation, would offset for the general business of the country any facilities that could possibly be created by a railroad built on heavy grades over the mountains, and besides we have in the Columbia pass the natural and easy railroad route. The great bulk of the products of the upper country, be assured, will come this way to the seaboard because it always will be the cheaper way. But a northern road across to the Sound will reach various parts of country not directly within the range of this main route. Such road in time would do a large business and would contribute greatly to the growth of its terminal point on Puget Sound, which would become the principal commercial center of that important part of the country. It is a grievous mistake to suppose that no town at Puget Sound can rise to importance without doing a corresponding injury to Portland. We must learn that we have a large country with many resources. It will grow as a whole, and the parts of it need not be envious of each other.

Nor is Western Oregon to be forgotten. Portland had its first development as the commercial point of this section. Its position is still the same, only it is relatively improved as railroads have been built. This city is situated at the confluence of two great avenues of travel and commerce. The advantages of nature are supported and confirmed by accumulated wealth, by active enterprise, by established routes of transportation and methods of business and by the feelings, usages and habits of a people formed and strengthened during the progress of thirty years. Can anybody in his senses imagine that all this can be changed or seriously interrupted? No possible combination of circumstances could affect it. Since the croakers have never been able to produce any impression by their doleful notes they might well cease now, since what they predict, if it ever was plausible, long since ceased to have even this to commend it.

THE NEW TIMBER LAW

It will be of importance to great numbers of people within the range of THE OREGONIAN'S circulation to be informed of the provisions of the new timber law which applies to the states of Oregon, California and Nevada and the territory of Washington. Before us is an attested copy of the act. The first section provides that surveyed public lands within these states and the territory valuable for timber but unfit for cultivation and which have not been offered for sale according to law may be sold to citizens of the United States or to persons who have declared their intention to become such in quantities not exceeding 160 acres to one person or association of persons at the minimum price of $2.50 an acre, and lands chiefly valuable for stone may be sold on the same terms as timber lands. The proviso is added that nothing herein contained shall defeat or impair any actual claim under any law of the United States. [illegible] two prescribes the [illegible] which the person shall prove who may desire to avail himself of the benefits of the [illegible] required to file with the register of the [illegible] a written statement in duplicate designating by legal subdivision the tract of land he desires to purchase, setting forth that the same is unfit for cultivation and valuable chiefly for its timber or stone; that he believes it does not contain any valuable deposit [illegible] and that [illegible] to purchase [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] possession [illegible] the person [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] the duties of the register to [illegible] the [illegible] in the time of the application [illegible] for a period of sixty days notice of the application with a description of the land by legal subdivisions and [illegible] the applicant a copy of the same for publication at his expense in a newspaper published nearest the location of the premises for a like period of sixty days. Thereupon payment of the purchase money with the fees of the register and receiver the applicant may be permitted to enter the tract and will be entitled to a patent on the transmission to the general land office of the papers and testimony in the case. Section four makes it unlawful to cut on the public lands any timber to be removed and sold, and prohibits transportation by any vessel or railroad of timber [illegible] under a penalty in each case of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. But to this section a provision of the greatest importance to settlers is added, namely, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any miner or agriculturist from clearing his land in the ordinary working of his mining claim or preparing his farm for tillage or from taking timber necessary to support his improvement. The fifth section provides that persons who have been cutting timber on public lands not for export from the United States may be relieved from prosecution and liability therefor by paying $2.50 an acre for the timber so cut and removed, but shall not have the title to the lands for such payment. The act was approved on the 3d June. The law is imperfect in that it makes no provision for survey of timber lands upon application. [illegible] persons who may desire to buy [illegible] greatly retards the settlement of the country to be compelled to wait for the invariably slow movements of the government in making necessary surveys, and the more so in the case of timber lands because the timber is so much wanted.

In Washington territory a number of persons have sharpened their knives and are feeling for the official scalp of Gov. Ferry. Several newspapers of the territory have spoken of the matter, and in political and other circles there is a great deal of talk about it which hasn't as yet got into the newspapers. The other day THE OREGONIAN copied from a [illegible] paper a statement that the charges of gross official misconduct against Ferry which are the basis of the movement against him were presented by Messrs. Wheat and McElroy. This, however, is an incorrect statement. The charges were presented by others. They are said to be backed by affidavits and other testimony both direct and circumstantial. According to the Walla Walla Statesman the most serious charge is an alleged abuse of the pardoning power. The governor, it is asserted, in order to secure a vote for the election of his candidate for speaker of the house, on a certain occasion promised to pardon a son or other relative of a member of the legislature. The vote, it is said, was secured and the pardon followed. Allegations as to this matter, with other charges, have been forwarded to Washington. The Statesman thinks Mr. Ferry will soon be requested to step down and out. It is probable that he can remain in office only by successfully refuting the charges, opportunity for which in such cases is usually accorded.

It is evident that Butler, in switching the Potter committee off the proper line of inquiry before it, does not care so much about discovering any alleged frauds in connection with the presidential election as to bring the Hayes administration into difficulty in another way. The object is to catch the persons whom Hayes sent to Louisiana to settle the dispute between the Packard and Nicholls governments. Butler is simply trying to carry the inquiry away from those dangerous reefs upon which Democrats may be wrecked into the safe waters where only Republicans are likely to be found. He wants to find and bring out proof that Hayes' commission went to Louisiana for the purpose of undermining the Packard government and that this was effected in pursuance of a bargain by which [illegible] sent. In this direction Butler is probably travelling wide of the mark, but of course he can count on the assistance of the Democrats in any undertaking that would embarrass Hayes or bring his special friends into disrepute, and this is just what Butler has in view. His object, like Antony's, is to set mischief afoot and let it take what course it will.

The reports of the Pacific railroad companies for the past four months give the strongest evidence of a large tide of emigration flowing westward. The land sales of the land grant companies have been, during that period, greater than those of any former period of the same length. Fifteen companies [illegible] statements of their land sales. From these reports we learn the Northern Pacific sold during the first four months of 1877 [illegible] acres, while during the same period this year 100,061 acres have been disposed of, an increase of more than one hundred per cent. The Kansas Pacific has done even better than this. It has disposed of 127,772 against [illegible] sold last year.

There is mighty little hero worship by the press of the United States. The chorus in unison which sounded the appointment of John C. Fremont to the governorship of Arizona as a merited reward for an eminent citizen cannot drown the discordant whisper that Fremont is still under indictment before the courts for swindling, and scarcely is the [illegible] ended [illegible]

CITY.

BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS. — Under date of June 10th the following post order has been received here from Fort Lapwai: The remains of 2d Lieut S M Rains and ten enlisted men of the 1st cavalry killed July 1877 in an action with hostile Nez Perces near Cottonwood House, Camas Prairie, having been brought to this post under escort of a detachment of company [illegible] 1st cavalry, will be interred with military honors at [illegible] today in the post cemetery. The escort will consist of forty enlisted men of company [illegible] and H, 1st cavalry, will be commanded by Lieut T T Knox 1st cavalry. The procession will be formed on the parade at [illegible] in the following order from right to left: 1st, band 21 infantry; [illegible] escort [illegible] 1st cavalry; [illegible] 1st cavalry, [illegible] 2d infantry; 6th Co D, 2d infantry, and will be marched thence to the temporary receptacle of the deceased. The pall bearers to the remains of Lieut I M Rains will consist of the six non commissioned officers highest in rank at the post. The commanding officer of Co H, 1st cavalry will detail six privates as pall bearers to the remains of the deceased enlisted men. All officers at the post will attend in full dress, and all enlisted men except the prisoners and sick in hospital in full dress and side arms.

PATENT BENCH PLANE. — We have been shown a patent bench plane which was invented by Mr Hans Shogren, a resident of the city. Mr Shogren perfected the invention and obtained his patent over a year ago. Being in limited circumstances, he has not been able to realize much on his invention. The plane is said to be superior to any in use, and is very highly recommended by a number of the leading mechanics of Portland. One great advantage possessed by this plane is that by an ingenious contrivance the knife can be worked up to a shoulder. Workmen of experience who have examined the tool affirm that it supplies a want long felt among mechanics. Mr J M Rice, a gentleman who formerly resided in this city will leave on the outgoing steamer for the east. His principal business is to introduce this plane to the notice of the public, and to make arrangements for having them manufactured. Mr Rice is an energetic business gentleman and we doubt not will succeed in pushing the invention into public notice.

MEMORIAL WINDOW. — From the Churchman it is learned that another stained glass window has just been put into St Luke's church. This is a memorial window with the following inscription: "Colonel and Mrs Hodge, U S A, in memory of their children." The central figure is the Saviour, who appears as the Good Shepherd with his shepherd's staff and bearing a lamb in his arms. This is a very handsome window, the design is good and the work very finely executed. Col Hodge, who, with his wife, contributed this window, was at one time stationed at this post, acting in the capacity of quartermaster. The colonel while here took a great interest in St Luke church, and we are pleased to see he has not forgotten it. The children for whom the window is a memorial were buried in the military cemetery at this post. It is from the celebrated Stained Glass Works of Buffalo, N Y, and is the fifth one that has been placed in this church.

S. K. MAYER. — Intelligence reached us by telegraph yesterday that among the killed at the recent fight between Bernard's command and the Indians, is a citizen scout named Myers. Mr Mayer started for the scene of the Indian troubles about two weeks ago and had previously arranged with Gen Howard to act as a scout. As there was no other Mayer, or, as the telegram has it, "Myers," acting in that capacity, it is fair to presume that young Mayer has met his death. Mr Mayer has been a resident of Portland scarcely eight months, during which time he has won the friendship and esteem of all who became acquainted with him. The event is a sad one and will be deeply regretted. Deceased came from Mississippi where his father and mother reside. He was an only child and the news of his early death will fall heavily upon his parents. We sincerely hope the report will prove untrue.

[illegible] RUN OVER. — Yesterday about eleven o'clock A. M., a small boy was run over near Weinhard's brewery by a large truck and very severely injured. The child is not more than four years old. The truck was passing through the gateway when the little fellow attempted to clamber on but missing his footing fell, and was run over, one wheel passing across the child's back. The driver discovered the little fellow's situation, but it was impossible to stop the team in time. After the accident the child was conveyed at once to the residence of its parents at the corner of Seventh and Morrison streets and by all accounts was in a very critical condition. Soon after the accident the teamster came down to the police station and relating the circumstances offered to give himself up. [illegible] no blame could be attached to him he was not taken into custody.

TEMPERANCE MASS MEETING. — A temperance mass meeting will this evening be held at the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, commencing promptly at eight o'clock, to which a pressing and cordial invitation is given to all. The exercises will consist in part of an address by Mr. Clinton of the Portland press and other good speakers, singing by Miss Latham, and vocal and instrumental music. Besides other attractions, Geo. W. Jackson, Esq., of Clackamas county, the well known and popular vocalist, who will, by the older citizens of Portland, be recollected as the person who sung the "Star Spangled Banner" at the first 4th of July celebration ever held in the state of Oregon, will be present this evening and sing several splendid temperance songs. Go early in order to obtain a comfortable seat.

EXIT ELWANGER, ENTER COAKLEY. — The wheel of fortune revolves with somewhat rapidity in police matters of late, and the man who is on top to day may be under the wheel to morrow. [illegible] days ago Officer Elwanger, by order of his superiors, surrendered his star to Coakley. The latter sported the shining symbol for a short space of time and the commissioners replaced it on Elwanger's breast. Again however, Elwanger is like [illegible] night, starless, for yesterday he was again suspended from duty and Coakley once more placed in the ranks as one of the guardians of the city's peace.

WEEKLY OREGONIAN. — Again that sterling paper, the weekly edition of THE OREGONIAN, puts in its appearance. This number, containing the official vote by counties, is certainly valuable to preserve. Besides this it contains an immense amount of intelligence relative to the country, general news, matter commercial and other selections. Nothing better than THE WEEKLY to send to your eastern friends or to have at home for your own use and then all the family.

[illegible] — There will be a meeting to morrow (Sunday) afternoon at 2 o'clock of the members of the committee of arrangements appointed by the Hibernian Benevolent Society to make all necessary preparations for the picnic to be given on the 4th at East Portland. A full attendance is desired.

[illegible] — At a recent meeting of Mystic Lodge No. 2, K of P., the following persons were elected: J B Kellogg, C C; Dale [illegible] Mr Pfluger, prelate.

BURNED. — The house occupied by Mr O B Addition at the head of Ninth street was destroyed by fire on Friday morning at about [illegible] o'clock. Mr A occupied the building for [illegible]. The contents of the building were consumed, nothing being saved. Mr Addition feels thoroughly satisfied that the fire was caused by an incendiary. The business will be [illegible] by Mr A in the same locality.

[illegible] — Mr O Kar[illegible], who for [illegible] has been employed as purser on the steamer [illegible] has [illegible] to the steamer [illegible]. Mr [illegible] has been [illegible] to the [illegible] and Mr [illegible] White [illegible] clerk on the [illegible].

A [illegible] — [illegible] A J Marshall [illegible] city has a little curiosity in his possession which he has owned for [illegible] years, [illegible] presented to him by a [illegible] [illegible] expecting to keep it as long as he lives.

[illegible] — [illegible] at the Express office [illegible] Fred Bagot, J B Bohm, [illegible] H Cavanaugh, Mrs Mary Hayden, J H Knowlton, W J Krome, Miss [illegible], Mrs [illegible], Mrs [illegible] Mason, Mrs [illegible], W S Plummer, H [illegible], J B Smith, G L Wells.

FIREWORKS. — We are informed that a sum of money has been raised by the citizens of [illegible] which will be appropriated for the purchase of fireworks. Mr Hughes, the well known pyrotechnist, will have charge of the display. The ground west of the [illegible] building will be used for the display.

DANGEROUS WEAPON. — Mike Sullivan was arrested for assault with a dangerous weapon on complaint of a man whose name is not given. Mike having lately had another party arrested and tried on a similar charge will now have a chance to know how it is himself.

MISSIONARY TRIP. — Rev A [illegible], pastor of the Scandinavian Evangelical Lutheran church of Portland, will be away on a missionary trip next Sunday. For that reason there will be no religious services in the church in East Portland or Portland.

CELEBRATION. — We understand that the patriotic citizens at Hood River propose to observe in a becoming manner the coming Fourth. The Dalles will send down a large excursion to that place. Rev [illegible] will conduct the [illegible] exercises.

AGAIN AT THE WHEEL. — Capt D [illegible] who for more than two years has been engaged as a river pilot on the lower [illegible], is again at the wheel. He is now in the employ of the O S N Company and is [illegible] the steamer Welcome.

REAL ESTATE SALE. — A lot in East Portland belonging to the estate of George [illegible], deceased, will be sold this morning at 10 o'clock, at the court house.

AMUSEMENTS

THE MINSTRELS. — The celebrated Haverly minstrels are still at Victoria playing to a splendid business. The company will [illegible] here next week, and the first performance will be given at New Market theater next Wednesday evening. Expectation is on tiptoe for a rare treat is assured the public. Reserved seats can still be procured.

FESTIVAL CONCERT. — To-night the first grand choral and instrumental concert of the Portland Handel and Haydn Society takes place at New Market Theater, and from the appearance of the diagram we predict a crowded house. The great success of the concert in April last and the fact that the society as now organized consists of only the best material in Portland (many who were absentees at the last concert having joined since) are sure guarantees that the entertainment will be one to be long remembered among our music loving public. The programme we have already published. Among the choral numbers we notice two worthy of particular mention, the well known "Prayer from Moses in Egypt" and the bass solo and chorus from the opera of Attila "Spirit Immortal." The anvil chorus which created such a furore at the last concert will be repeated with even more brilliant accessories and we are to be favored with solos by Miss Emma Miller and Miss Eugenie Rosenthal, both ladies Portland favorites, also by Mr Kinross and last but not least Miss Iora Abrams will sing a duet with the latter gentleman. The orchestra will be composed of Professors Brenner and Kay and the leading members of the Amateur Musical Society and will be considerably larger than before. Our citizens should not fail to embrace the present opportunity of hearing this really grand musical entertainment, besides as the concert is a complimentary one tendered to their conductor by the Handel and Haydn Society, the public ought to show by their unqualified support their appreciation of his coming to settle amongst us, as he supplies a great want in our midst, viz. A competent teacher of vocalization. There are still a few desirable seats to be had.

BRIEF NOTES.

PICNICS.

Extensive arrangements are being made by Willamette Tribe No 6 Improved Order of Red Men for a grand Fourth of July picnic which will be held at Canyon Garden. Splendid music has been engaged and there will be abundant opportunity to indulge in the "mazy art." In the evening there will be a grand display of fireworks.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

John Chapman, detering a building not his own; defendant discharged on payment of costs.

E F Hutchison, abusive language; $10.

Henry Myer, violating [illegible]; dismissed.

PERSONAL.

Mr Edward Lloyd, the young gentleman who has so efficiently and satisfactorily held the position of signal officer at this place for nearly two years past, will take his departure this morning on the Elko. He has been assigned to the office at Visalia, California. He leaves many friends here. Bon voyage.

SOCIAL EVENTS

WILLAMETTES BALL. — Preparations for this grand event on the 4th of July are going forward, many tickets have been sold and everything promises well for the greatest success ever achieved in this city in the way of a public party.

INSTALLMENT PLAN. — Workingmen and those with limited means, will do well to consult Atkinson & Wakefield's ad regarding lots for sale.

Corsets, corsets from 50 cents upwards at Mrs Chas Tichnor's corner First and Yamhill.

Barnes, at Central Market, is doing a land office business.

A GAY YOUTH IN DIFFICULTY

Albert Frost, a young German, was arrested at an early hour yesterday morning on the charge of burglary. He having entered the [illegible] of Mr [illegible] on First street a few doors north of [illegible]. [illegible] Mr [illegible] and his bartender [illegible] Waite [illegible] [illegible] Waite [illegible] the [illegible]. This induced Waite [illegible] was [illegible] a sharp [illegible] [illegible] at the front [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] He [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] He [illegible] [illegible] the city jail and on being [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] He was engaged to be married [illegible] last Sunday night. Every preparation was made for the marriage and the intended bride had arrayed herself in her wedding attire for the ceremony. Without any apparent reason in the world [illegible] [illegible] and the humiliation of the parents and friends. He kept from sight for several days but was found at length [illegible] [illegible] told a long and very transparent story [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] today at the city jail and had an interview with the young [illegible] [illegible] sensible and plucky girl she [illegible] him to his fate and told him that she discarded him forever. He seemed to feel very sorry at first but [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to take the situation more [illegible].

We understand that the parents of Frost reside a short distance from this city and that they are very respectable people. There seems to be no excuse whatever for the conduct of this wayward young man. An effort is being made to compromise the matter but the present prospects are not quite flattering that Frost will be afforded the privilege of [illegible] the state substantial service.

GLASS BALL SHOOTING

The announcement that a glass ball shooting tournament would come off at the White House Thursday afternoon had the effect to attract a large crowd. The first match was for a purse of $50, divided as follows: $25 to the first, $15 to the second and $10 to the third. There were ten entries, the contestants shooting at ten balls. The following is the score:

Bennett	11 011110—6
Autrey	11 00110 1 [illegible]
Hamilton	00100 0010
Stevens	10 101 0110 6
Barrell	110 100110 5
Acker	1101 11111—7
Frettyman	1001 01101—6
Lewelling	00 00010—1
Burns	111110101 7
Murphy	0 0110101—5

Between Acker and Burns there was a tie—each having made 7. The gentlemen, in sporting parlance, "sawed off," for the first and second money. Acker won. For the third money there was a tie between Bennett, Stevens and Frettyman. The latter gentleman won.

Following this came a sweep take, three entries at $10, ten balls each. The following is the score:

Burns	1011111101 8
Acker	101111 111—8
Stevens	1010101010

There was a tie between Acker and Burns but the gentlemen concluded to divide the money.

The last contest was a sweepstakes of eight entries at $2 50, five balls each. Following is the result:

Lewelling	01 00[illegible]—1
Autrey	0 010 1
Barrell	1 011
Acker	1 010 [illegible]
Bennett	1 011 3
Stevens	10111 4
Burns	11110 4
Frettyman	10111 4

In shooting off the tie the one missing first was declared out of the match and the one hitting the longest took the money. Frettyman kept breaking balls till his five [illegible] all missed when he was declared winner.

WHAT A GOOD QUEEN COSTS

THE VAST [illegible] EXPENSES [illegible]

[illegible] New York Sun

When Queen Victoria came to the throne in 1837 the usual steps were taken to provide for the support of her majesty and the royal household. A select committee of [illegible] was appointed by the house of commons to prepare estimates for such support. The charges for the household of William IV were made the basis of their calculations. They seem really to have taken as a model that of [illegible] and to have arranged the present one on [illegible] exactly the same plan and with [illegible] the same expenses. Her majesty's privy purse [illegible] yearly, [illegible] household expenses $[illegible], for royal bounty, etc $[illegible], [illegible] items $40 200, [illegible] about $1 925 000. This estimate was accepted by the house of commons and so [illegible] stands to-day. Some of the [illegible] provision was made [illegible] absolutely no [illegible]. Yet the fees are still collected and the [illegible] are [illegible] as before.

This is by no means constitutes the whole expense of the Queen's household, and this lump sum of $1 925 000 is by no means her whole income from the National Treasury. She also receives the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster which amount to $[illegible]. The amount from this source [illegible] was the sum received for the last year reported [illegible]. This swells her Majesty's privy purse to $[illegible] per annum out of the funds of the nation. On this sum she has absolutely no demands for her [illegible] ordinary expenses. It is clear pocket money. She is under no necessity of laying out a single penny of it for every possible expense seems to be provided for in other allowances. If she travels by water a yacht is placed at her disposal at government expense. If she travels by rail the country likewise foots the bill by an additional allowance. Even for charity she need not draw upon her own purse for a liberal grant is made for this express purpose. Not only does she travel by water in royal yachts, but a small fleet of these yachts is built and kept in repair for her particular use. This in itself is an enormous extra bill but I have no means of finding the amount of it. The maintenance of royal palaces takes an additional $157 000 a year and the maintenance of royal parks and pleasure gardens takes another $20[illegible] per annum.

Adding the annual allowance to her majesty the net revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster and the maintenance of royal palaces, parks, and pleasure gardens we have a total of $2,82[illegible] a year. This does not include the traveling expenses of the Queen, the maintenance of the royal yachts, or any of half a dozen other important items which are strictly a part of the expenses of royalty in England. Allowances to other members of the royal family are also additional items.

In fact, as an English author says: "If all the expenses incidental to the honor and dignity of the crown could be ascertained it would be found that the £385 000 annually settled by parliament upon her majesty constitutes but a very small portion of the actual cost of royalty."

It would be wrong to blame the Queen individually with any great part of the responsibility of her absurd and expensive household. It is a creature of the British aristocracy as a whole, and the Queen is only a kind of central figure of the system which the country has built. I may add that the Queen also has a large private fortune, from which it is estimated she realizes an income of no less than $1 000 000 a year in addition to the amount paid her by the nation.

The allowances to the royal family, not including the Queen, amount to $78[illegible] 000 yearly. The revenue of the Prince of Wales from the Duchy of Cornwall — about $350 000 annually — is not included in this sum. Summing up the leading items of the cost of royalty in England, we have a total of $3 [illegible]4 430. If all the items could be ascertained I do not doubt that the total given would be found to be not more than one half the direct annual cost of royalty in this country.

PLEASURE BOATS.

JOHN LACHAPELLE, Boat Builder is prepared to furnish Boats for Sale or Rent at any moment, Boat House foot of Pine street.

THE HOUSE IN THE MEADOW

It stands in a sunny meadow
The house so mossy and brown
With its cumbrous old stone chimneys
And the gray roof sloping down

The trees fold their green arms round it
The trees a century old
And the winds go chanting through them
And the sunbeams sift their gold

The cowslips spring in the marshes
The roses bloom on the hill
And beside the brook in the pasture
The herds go feeding at will

[illegible]
[illegible] sit in the sun
[illegible]
Till the day is almost done

The children have grown up [illegible]
They sit in the [illegible]
And the old wife's ears are failing
As she harks to the well known [illegible]

That won her heart in her girlhood
That hath soothed her in many a care
And praises her now for the brightness
Her old face used to wear

She thinks again of her bridal
How dressed in her robe of white
She stood by her gay young lover
In the morning's rosy light

Oh the morning is rosy as ever
But the rose from her cheek is fled
And the sunshine still is golden
But it falls on a silvered head

And the girlhood dreams [illegible]
Come back in her winter time
Till her feeble pulses tremble
With the thrill of spring time's prime

And looking forth from the window
She thinks how the trees have grown
Since clad in her bridal whiteness
She crossed the old door stone

Though dimmed her eyes' bright azure
And dimmed her hair's young gold
The love in her girlhood plighted
Has never grown dim nor cold

They sat in peace in the sunshine
Till the day was almost done
And then at its close an angel
Stole over the threshold stone

He folded their hands together
He touched their eyelids with balm
And their last breath floated outward
Like the close of a solemn psalm

Like a bridal pair they traversed
The unseen mystical road
That leads to the beautiful city
Whose Builder and Maker is God

Perhaps in that miracle country
They will give her lost youth back
And the flowers of the vanished spring time
Will bloom in the spirit's track

One draught from the living waters
Shall call back his manhood's prime
And eternal years shall measure
The love that outlasted time

But the shapes that they left behind them
The wrinkles and silver hair
Made holy to us by the kisses
The angel had printed there

We will hide away 'neath the willows
When the day is low in the west
Where the sunbeams cannot find them
Nor the winds disturb their rest

And we'll suffer no telltale tombstone
With its age and date to rise
O'er the two who are old no longer
In the Father's house in the skies

LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON

MARSHALL'S BARN

A NEW ENGLAND STORY

Silverton is quite an old fashioned New England town lying in as charming a bit of country as one would wish to see. Soon after leaving the village, the road towards the south passes an old stone house which has been standing there ever since revolutionary times and still looks strong enough to be the future home of generations yet unborn.

About and beyond it lie broad fields of grain growing yellow under the August sunshine and acres of corn rustling in the summer breeze.

And all this is the property of one fortunate man. Standing upon the broad balcony of the old stone house he can look toward the east and toward the west and call it his own almost as far as he can see.

But some years ago the farm had two owners and Richard Dean who lived in the stone house and John Marshall who owned the land opposite to it on the other side of the road, were no friends. There had been some ancient quarrel about landmarks and Capulets and Montagues the families had nursed their enmity, and transmitted it from the father to the son along with the family acres.

There had been Deans and Marshalls in Silverton almost from the time when the town first had a name, but they were from widely different walks in life. The first of the Deans was an English gentleman of fortune, who, in traveling through the country was charmed with the natural beauty of the place, bought a large tract of land there, and built the stone house of this story.

The first of the Marshalls came into Silverton with all the worldly goods in a bundle which he carried under his arm, and the bundle was not heavy. He came a hired man to one of the farmers in the neighbourhood. After a year's service he married the farmer's daughter who being an only child in process of time dutifully inherited her father's acres, and handed them over to her lucky lord.

Since those days there had been great changes. None of the Deans had ever added to their original inheritance, and one of the race had so crippled his resources by extravagant living that it became necessary for him to sell a portion of his estate.

The Marshalls from father to son had ever been a frugal set and the grandfather of John Marshall was, by this time able to buy the land his fast living neighbor was forced to part with. It was from a dispute as to landmarks, arising from this sale that the quarrel which we have mentioned sprang. The case was carried to law, the Deans came off victorious, and the Marshalls never forgave it.

Moreover it was rumored that when Richard Dean, of this story married the beautiful daughter of the old Silverton clergyman it touched John Marshall very nearly so that between the old wound to the pocket and the new wound to the affections the family quarrel seemed in no way likely to die out.

It reached its climax when the two farmers who belonged to opposite parties in politics became rival candidates for election to the state legislature. John Marshall was beaten and choosing to consider his defeat as a direct personal injury inflicted by his neighbor vowed that he would be even with him. And Richard Dean, when he came home at the close of his session found that this had been no idle threat.

Across the road directly in front of his house, loomed up before him the frame of a huge barn. Workmen were busy plying their noisy hammers, loose timbers were scattered about great heaps of boards lay piled up here and there ready for use and all the dirt and rubbish of building defaced the once beautiful meadow.

Mr Dean stood aghast, and could scarcely believe his eyes. His pretty daughter tripped out upon the balcony to meet him but almost before the kiss with which she greeted him was off from her pouting lips she exclaimed

"O papa is it not a shame? Could you have believed that any man would be so mean? Is there nothing to be done? Must we have that horrid barn always before our eyes?"

Yes the barn was there and stayed. Mr Dean found himself powerless. A man has a right to build where he will on his own land, and the law cannot prevent him putting himself to any amount of trouble expense and inconvenience for the very laudable object of executing his spite on his neighbor. In the eye of the law the barn could not be made to appear a nuisance whatever it might be to the dwellers in the stone house. So there was nothing to be done but to pocket their wrath, and if possible, to possess their souls in patience, while the monster grew, day by day, until at last it stood complete in its ugliness, cutting off the view of the beautiful western hills and the pretty pond which nestled at their feet, hiding the big knoll where a group of gigantic pine trees kept watch and ward over the meadows below them and shutting out even the sunset.

The acme of ugliness was reached and the disappointed farmer's revenge must have been fully satisfied when the building had been painted the brightest tawdriest yellow that ever disgraced a paint pot and "Marshall's Barn" had become a byword in the neighborhood.

Whatever the [illegible] Mr Dean remained [illegible] of saying [illegible]

But Miss Alice had no [illegible] patiently [illegible] [illegible] Alice was seen daily in the [illegible] with her own hand and superintend [illegible] the labors of others [illegible] [illegible] with their [illegible] growth

All this [illegible] [illegible] had bare every tree and shrub stripped the leaves from the vines [illegible] among the flower baskets then the barn [illegible] [illegible] the great yellow blot upon the landscape. In fact as they looked out of the balcony windows of the stone house it seemed [illegible] only thing that was seen.

Mr Dean tried to take the matter philosophically since there was no remedy for it and he succeeded in putting it out of his mind about as well as people generally do when a thing is constantly in sight. But Alice who was a lady of some spirit was at no pains either to lessen or conceal her indignation. Her mother had been dead for many years and during [illegible] before the marriage of her only sister had [illegible] her sole mistress of her father's home [illegible] had the greatest pride and delight in her ancestral home and these feelings together with her artistic sense of the beautiful in nature were so galled by this hideous barn set under her very eyes that she could never [illegible] without [illegible] of wrath [illegible]

It was during the winter [illegible] calling [illegible] this barn that young Marshall [illegible] was called home from Europe. John Marshall had bestowed upon his only son every opportunity for that extended [illegible] and culture which he [illegible] had hitherto considered of little worth [illegible] accumulation of land and [illegible] [illegible] John would have what he wants [illegible] does not squander it.

A son who by the young man did not [illegible] since [illegible] how to spend generously he had never exceeded the annual allowance granted him by his father.

So heir to the Marshall farm [illegible] grown to be the largest in the county [illegible] looking, frank and jovial and with a [illegible] and grace of manner conferred by three years of foreign travel he speedily became the lion of Silverton. All village parties and social gatherings [illegible] to welcome and do him honor with one exception. A haughty bow was the only acknowledgment that Alice Dean would ever give him [illegible] She could not be brought to [illegible] herself in any conversation in which he took part and her cool withdrawal from a group which he chanced to join would often place their mutual friends in embarrassing positions. Her father having noticed this on one occasion when they had been out together [illegible] home, mildly suggesting that she should endeavor to keep her angry feelings a little more out of sight.

"This young man is not to blame for his father's conduct you know," he remarked.

"Of course, not" said Alice "but he's his father's son and a chip of the old block I dare say. No" she added after a moment's silence "it's of no use trying I can never be civil to a Marshall, with that hideous yellow barn staring me in the face."

Five minutes later Mr Dean who had taken up and was looking over his newspaper laid it down in a hurry as Alice remarked, in a slow, deliberate way as though she had at last made up her mind

"Papa that barn will be the ruin of my temper. I am going to set fire to it."

Mr Dean glanced about the room half afraid that they were not alone before he replied

"My child that may be a pleasant little joke of yours but it is lucky that there was no one to hear it but myself."

"It is no joke at all papa. I am quite serious. I have been thinking about it for some time and I mean to do it."

Mr Dean took off his eye glasses and looked attentively at his daughter.

"Upon my word I believe the child has some such intention," he said to himself. To her he said

"It is your opinion then that you have a right to make away with your neighbor's property whenever your pleasure is not consulted in its situation?"

"It is my opinion" said Alice with the confident logic of eighteen years "that my neighbor has no right to set up an abominable nuisance under my very nose. And if he can't be made to remove it I think I should be justified in getting rid of it in the easiest way possible."

"And you think also upon mature consideration" said Mr Dean "that you would prefer the view of four walls in the state prison, for the next ten or fifteen years to that of your neighbor's barn?"

"Is that the punishment for arson?"

"It is."

"O, but I should not be caught. I have several plans, any of which is quite safe."

"But, unfortunately you have a witness of your intentions" said Mr Dean quite seriously.

"No one but you and of course you wouldn't testify against me?"

"Indeed I should" returned Mr Dean, with the air of a stern impartial judge.

"O papa, I won't believe it."

And then Alice took a seat upon her father's knee.

"Yes" said the inexorable father "I mean it. If you burn Mr Marshall's barn I shall tell all I know about the matter."

"And send me to prison."

"To be sure. I would be sorry of course as it would deprive me of a valuable housekeeper. Nevertheless I should feel bound to do it."

And Mr Dean looking into the large blue eyes which gazed at his with such a serious expression seemed half in earnest.

"Come come Alice" he exclaimed at length "It is high time for us to put a stop to such talk as this and what is more you must promise me not to harbor such dangerous notions in that busy brain of yours."

"I can't promise. It is impossible to control one's thoughts you know" returned Alice with a shake of the head that was comically serious.

"Very well" said Mr Dean "then I must put you in a strait jacket and keep you where you will be in no danger of doing mischief."

Here the pretty incendiary burst into her usual merry laugh kissed her father, bade him good night and went to her room coming back to say

"I won't burn the barn to night papa, so you can rest in peace."

It was late in March, and the day had been very warm, one of those sultry days which come unexpectedly, and, taking us unawares, half prostrate us with their sudden heat. Clouds had been threatening all the evening great masses which seemed to gather blackness as they rolled westward and at midnight low growls of thunder began to break the stillness and the big drops of rain to patter noiselessly against the window pane.

Alice awoke and lay watching the vivid flashes which [illegible] lighted up her room and left it in blacker darkness than before [illegible] [illegible] peal after peal of thunder [illegible] the old house [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

The barn was on fire

The lightning had [illegible] [illegible] upon the blackness and [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr Dean's room was on the opposite side of the house and he [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] when Alice [illegible] burst into his room

"O papa, papa the barn is burning! But I didn't do it. You see I was right though, for Providence has taken the affair into his own hands and saved me the trouble."

"Very [illegible]" said Mr Dean as by the [illegible] light of the [illegible] he saw her [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] in her long white gown like a frisky goat. She had no little trouble in convincing her father that she was in her right mind and [illegible] him to follow her as she hurried back to her post by the window to watch the remainder of the brilliant spectacle.

There was no more sleep that night for the family in the stone house and when morning broke cloudless and beautiful after the storm the [illegible] [illegible] spread out before them [illegible] its old familiar beauty and Marshall's barn a heap of ruins at their feet.

For one short week Mr Dean and his daughter rejoiced over their unlooked for deliverance. They blessed the storm and congratulated themselves morning, noon and night as they gazed upon the unbroken prospect which had never seemed half so charming before. Then there began to be a stir among the few charred and black[ened] timbers which the fire had spared. Fresh loads were deposited beside them load after load of building materials arrived and to their utter dismay they learned that the barn was to be rebuilt. Mr Dean remonstrated to no purpose and friendly neighbors vainly tried their persuasions on the obstinate old man. Young Marshall who was deeply mortified and grieved at his father's course exerted all the eloquence which he possessed to prevent the carrying out of this malicious design but the only reply which he received was "See here my boy you come and go as you choose and I interfere with none of your plans. You act your pleasure and I shall act mine."

So the work went on with [illegible] speed and the raising [illegible] was at hand. A crowd had gathered as was [illegible] usual [illegible] occasions in the country. The huge frame was being slowly hoisted to its place with its shouts and cheers and heave a ways when some part of the structure suddenly gave way and timber after timber came tumbling to the ground. Two or three men received ugly knocks and hard bruises but all escaped without serious injury with one exception. John Marshall lay upon the ground under a heavy timber, with a broken arm and a stream of blood flowing from a wound in his head cut by a sharp stone upon which he had struck in falling.

He was taken up insensible and laid upon the grass, water was dashed in his face to revive him and his head bound up in handkerchiefs to stop the flow of blood. A doctor was quickly brought to the spot sewed up the wound and bandaged the disabled arm.

"What is to be done with him?" he asked with a grave face as he concluded the operation. "To move him any distance in his present condition would surely prove fatal."

"Bring him into my house and we will do the best we can for him," said Mr Dean who came out on hearing of the accident.

So the unconscious man was carried in and placed upon a bed and there he lay for many a long day prostrated and helpless in the house of him whom he had hated and injured. His son had been sent for but the messenger was long in finding him. When he arrived the crowd had dispersed and Mr Dean was standing by the bedside of his father while Alice was bathing the invalid's head striving to keep it cool with applications of ice.

"Mr Dean," said the young man after gazing silently for some minutes at his father who was still in a state of stupor, "I should in any case be extremely sorry for such an intrusion as this but under the circumstances I feel that it is truly unpardonable. I will have my poor father removed to night if it is possible."

"You must not think of such a thing" Mr Dean replied warmly. "The doctor has expressly forbidden it. You must take care of your father here, and in doing so I trust you will spare yourself all uneasiness as to intrusion. Make yourself as comfortable as you can and allow us to render you any assistance in our power."

"Good heavens! Are we to thrust ourselves upon you in this way?" exclaimed young Marshall half beside himself with anxiety for his father's safety and mortification at the embarrassing position in which he found himself. "I beg pardon, sir but your generosity makes me feel more painfully than ever that all claim to it has been forfeited. I can only assure you that even you yourself cannot have regretted the cause of trouble more than I have done."

"I believe you" said Mr Dean cordially much affected by this impulsive expression of feeling. He extended his hand which Mr Marshall received gratefully while Alice who had melted at the first signal of distress wished from the bottom of her heart that she had treated the young man with more consideration. Her blue eyes were swimming when he said to her "Pray let me relieve you Miss Dean. I fear you [illegible] yourself already."

Weeks had passed before John Marshall became fully conscious of his situation. Fever set in and the germ delirium and when at last the delirium passed away he fell into a stupor which seemed a most more hopeless than his former state. He had been lying for a long time with scarcely a sign of life about him except the feeble fluttering of his pulse when his son, who had watched over him night and day saw him slowly open his eyes and gaze with a look of faint wonder about the room. He was too weak to speak but when days had elapsed and he gained sufficient strength he asked no questions. The barn or rather its skeleton, which remained as it had been left on the day of the accident was in plain sight from a window near his bed, and he would lie hour after hour gazing at it silently thinking his eyes at any attempt at conversation, and scarcely giving an answer to the few questions which were put to him.

Young Marshall was sitting one day sadly wondering what were the thoughts over which he seemed brooding, when the sick man turned slowly in his bed, and in a quiet way, as though it was no uncommon request that he was about to make said to his son

"I think I should like to have you see that every thing belonging to that barn over there is carried off and the place cleared up. Do it as soon as possible will you?"

"Certainly father if you wish it" his son remarked not knowing whether to be most astonished or rejoiced.

"I think you can attend to it now" said Mr Marshall. "I [illegible] I think I shall go to sleep." And he closed his eyes [illegible] he said

Young Marshall was not slow in executing his father's wishes [illegible] two days had not passed before [illegible] [illegible] appeared [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] "And when I am well [illegible] I should like to see Mr Dean [illegible]

So [illegible] [illegible] weak broken down man [illegible] [illegible] ever while he had [illegible] [illegible] before. Sitting up into an arm chair which Mr Dean made ready for him while Alice slyly arranged the pillows about him he [illegible] in a voice shaken with weakness and [illegible]

"Richard Dean I [illegible] I have not thanked you for anything [illegible] I have been [illegible] You and I were once the best of friends [illegible] [illegible] ever since [illegible] I set my face against you. [illegible] a wrong I will repay," said the old man. He kept his word. He has [illegible] [illegible] This thing has made [illegible] [illegible] long I shall last [illegible] I want to make my peace with you Richard and your family and to live as friends for the rest of my days if you will let bygones be bygones."

"With all my heart" said Mr Dean grasping in both his own the thin white hand held out to him. "We shall have you hale and hearty [illegible] and we shall begin anew and from this day henceforth Marshalls and Deans shall dwell together in amity."

"That's just what Alice has promised me," said young Marshall twining his arm about the blue eyed girl by his side all tears and smiles and blushes while the two fathers gazed one with astonishment which soon changed to gladness and the other with a satisfied look in his eyes which had long seen what was going on between the young people.

Meanwhile the sun went down upon a group the like of which was never seen in Silverton.

The lovers have long been happily married and an orchard of apple trees is now growing where once stood Marshall's barn.

THE CITY

[illegible]

I love the city. It may be with [illegible]
Its gilded palaces dark crime and sin
And sure destruction yet it holds for me
Much that is bright and beautiful beside
I love its noise and bustle—like the free
[illegible] current [illegible]
[illegible] heart [illegible]
[illegible] by the world's exciting strife

I like the medley of strange sounds that [illegible]
The engine's shriek, the steamer's sudden [illegible]
The roll of wheels the careless children's cries
The laugh, the shout, the lute's soft sighing [illegible]
And music [illegible] making melody
That I exist and have a part [illegible] a voice
In this great busy bustling world that rolls
Forever onward with its freight of souls

I like the singing echo of swift feet
[illegible]
I like the [illegible] eyes sparkling
[illegible] and I feel myself made [illegible]
By those unseen electric sparks that [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] the city and there find
All breath and inspiration for my mind
Far deeper than depths of solitude to me
Is the great heart of all humanity

KIT'S MISSION

The Major arrived just before supper and when it was over the young folks as usual took possession of him. Seated in his big arm chair before the blazing fire with his ruddy face twinkling blue eyes, soldierly whiskers and slight brogue he was their very ideal of a brave old Irish gentleman all of the olden time.

"And so you've graduated Tom my boy" he said.

"Yes" the young man replied sullenly "With all the honors of course."

"With no honors. I never was intended to make a mark in the world."

"Have you chosen your profession?" asked the Major cheerily, pretending not to see the lad's discontented face.

"No. It does not matter much what I do. Some fellows have money to begin the world with and some talent. Bob Fitch had an aptitude for medicine his brother for the law while Joe there is a born machinist. But I have no capital of any sort. I don't know why God sends useless people into the world."

The Major made no reply. He saw that Tom was bitter under some college defeat. It was no time for serious reproof. He turned to the children therefore who were climbing his knees and bringing their stools closer in preparation of a story.

"An Irish story please."

"A duel, Major" said Jack.

"No no. Fairy [illegible] ghost" pleaded Mary.

"Tut tut. You know my stock too well. Let me see. Did I ever tell you of the man who lived in his coffin?"

"No. Oh, go on!" their eyes dilating with the delight of a new horror.

"It was in 1820" began the Major toasting his feet comfortably "that I was sent on a visit to my uncle a farmer in County Cork. I was about your age Jack a hearty eater a good shot and a great deal fonder of fun than of books.

"My uncle's house was a great low rambling building with plenty of windows and big roaring fires untidy and comfortable full and running over with children dogs and servants. I was stunned at first with the scale on which the eating and fun and frolic went on.

"My uncle was only a dairy farmer. In this country he would have felt it right to save every penny for his eleven children But in Ireland he felt it to be his duty to keep his table filled with poor folk the year round.

"They're unfortunate" my aunt replied when I questioned why they were there "Isn't that reason enough?"

"In the kitchen it was just the [illegible] Besides the cook farm hands [illegible] loom women for the linen [illegible] linen there were a legion of [illegible] and dependents cluttering up the [illegible]

"They're not beggars they're [illegible]" said my aunt "[illegible] They earn their bite and sup.

"Old Molly now [illegible] She cannot hear thunder [illegible]

"Oh she sits in the [illegible]

"And lame Davy

"He—he goes for [illegible] twice a week triumphantly

"And the idiots Patsy and Patty

"Why child they're innocents. God have them in His keeping."

"My uncle's way of life was that of his neighbors. I suppose it was extravagant and foolish, and yet when I remember how the poor and helpless were received and fed as if sent by God I wonder sometimes if there were not a better wisdom than economy in it.

"There was one young lad in the house with whom I soon formed a friendship. His name was Dick Clancy. He was a hard student, and was reading his humanities in the village school, preparatory to entering Trinity College at Dublin.

"'Is Clancy a kinsman of yours?' I asked my uncle

"'No. He is what is called a "poor scholar." When a poor lad wishes to receive an education he is taught without charge at any school and goes from house to house saying at each as long as he chooses. A poor scholar is always welcome. We think God's blessing goes with him to the [illegible] of learning.'

"We were at supper I remember when he said this. It was a wild stormy night. The ground was covered [illegible] [illegible] the wind [illegible] storm we heard a [illegible]

[illegible]

"He saw [illegible]

[illegible]

"Kit was [illegible] a man who had been for twenty years paralyzed in his legs. He lived in a narrow box like a coffin [illegible] as [illegible] bed and went from house to house staying a week or month at each as suited him. The poorest houses in the county took their turn of entertaining him.

"When my aunt whispered this explanation to me I looked at the wretched creature with one half of his body dead and wondered how he could bear so much misery.

"Why doesn't he make them throw him in the bog and make an end of it?" I asked. "I don't see how a man can endure to be a dead weight on others for so many years."

"Wait and you will see," said my aunt.

"After supper I went out to the kitchen from whence came loud shouts of laughter. Kit's coffin was placed near the fire and a square box which he carried under his head was open before him. He was distributing and at once his jokes and cures for burns toothache [illegible] more serious diseases patterns of children's clothes recipes for puddings every kind of useful scraps of information in a word which could be carried in his head or his box.

"I sat [illegible] him and his box as I was noticed the remarkable tact and [illegible] kindness which he showed under all his fun. He turned his bright shrewd eyes on me presently

"'You see, young gentleman I can't follow a profession or trade so I have to take up the odds and ends which nobody else seems to need to make myself useful.'

"My uncle told me that Kit had acquired much skill in the cure of simple ailments and that with his odds and ends he was in fact one of the most useful men in the country.

"The storm increased and Kit remained all night. He was [illegible] in front of the kitchen fire the straw of his bed renewed and warm coverlids spread over the coffin.

"My own chamber was over the kitchen There were cracks in the flooring through which I could look down and through which too ruddy flashes of firelight came up cheerfully.

"After the house was all quiet Patsy the innocent came into the kitchen and throwing down a blanket on the warm hearth near to Kit curled up on it like a dog.

"The neighborhood of the queer pair made me restless I suppose for I could not sleep. I heard the clock in the hall strike midnight and then one o'clock. Then a muffled sound struck my ear, very different from the noise of the storm. It was the drawing back of the heavy bar from the outer door.

"'Probably Dennis the shepherd is going out to look after his lambs' I thought and turned over to sleep. But the next moment I rose uneasily and crept to the window. Through the gray storm without I could see that the road and yard were filled with dark figures stealthily surrounding the house. I understood it all at a glance.

"The year had been one of great suffering—almost of famine—and bands of desperate men had attacked several of the farm houses in that part of the country which they had plundered and then set on fire. These desperate men were still at large. It was asserted that they were peasants heretofore decent and honest men. Whoever they might be it was certain that, as soon as caught they would swing for it.

"I shook with terror. I knew that my uncle had a large sum of money in his chamber [illegible] received for cattle and doubtless these men knew it too. I saw that there was enough of them to overpower the men in the house even if they were awake and armed.

"My room was separated by a long corridor from my uncle's. I groped for the door my teeth chattering with cold when the firelight flashing up below showed me a sight which held me motionless.

"They were already in the house. The kitchen was full of sturdy fellows all armed, their frieze coats covered with snow and their faces swathed with [illegible]

"[illegible] kitchen was separated from the house by a long passage [illegible]

[illegible]

"They'll murder him [illegible] lips were glued [illegible] with terror. Kit [illegible] as a dead man [illegible]

"'Pe[illegible]ers' said one 'we'll [illegible] some then [illegible] before we go for the ould man's money. I didn't know how near starved I was at all but the sight of the ate makes me sick.'

"'Ye're a fool Pat Grady. There's enough silver in his chest to keep us for a year. Howly Mother [illegible] what's here' as another flash of firelight showed the coffin.

"'I'm [illegible] Crawford,' said Kit quietly. 'It's you is it that kerries on this work?'

"'[illegible]' muttered the ruffian changing his voice. 'I'm no [illegible] [illegible]'

"'[illegible] And you Pat Grady. And [illegible] Francis [illegible] I know [illegible] name and [illegible] to the gallows [illegible]

"Grady sprang at him with a smothered yell brandishing a knife.

"Kit's face turned ghastly pale. Life I suppose was as dear to the poor fragment of a man as it is to you or me. But his eyes never flinched.

"'Ye'd murdher me Patrick Grady? Me! [illegible]'

"The knife shook in the murderer's hand. 'I'd murdher any informer' said the man sullenly.

"'I'm no informer. I'd never open my lips bove on this night's work if it's the last. But if you touch a hair of the squire's head or go into this house an inch I'll hang every man of yees!'

"He raised his corpse like head and shook his skinny hand at them. I've been in many a battle, but I never saw such desperate courage as was shown by this cripple in his coffin. The idiot Patsy roused by the noise scrambled to his knees and stared terrified about him.

"The men stood paralyzed. The superstition which taught them to protect these two helpless creatures was strong enough to hold them motionless, even in the face of Kit's threats.

"'Make an end of it!' growled Crawford. 'Put a bullet in his skull.'

"Not a man moved. Kit with a terrible effort raised himself higher in his coffin.

"'Come an' do it yerself, Michael Crawford. Kill the cripple and the innocent by ye dure. There's a mightier one watching ye,' pointing suddenly to the stormy sky seen through the open door.

"The men stared at him and at the driving storm with visible terror. Michael began to whine after the fashion of his class.

"'Ye know ye're safe Kit an' it's not an informer ye'd be that sleep under our roof. Drunk wid us?'

"'I'll never mintion yer names, if yees leave this be the last uv it. Take that mate wid yees an' two of the flitches I'll make it right wid the Squire. He never let a hungry man from his dure.'

"'Three for you. No more he did. For the Howly Mother we'll go straight home!' They left the house and took the gang with them.

"'They'll rob the next house,' said Kit, dropping back exhausted. 'But I did the best I could.'

"He was right. By daylight came the news that they had attacked the house of a wealthy gentleman near town, who was prepared for them. There was a desperate fight; the ringleaders were arrested, tried and hanged, and the band broken up. Then I told my uncle how the poor cripple and innocent, whom he had taken in from charity, had protected him, when no arms could have done."

The Major's story brought forth many criticisms from the children. But Tom came up behind him and said quietly

"I think I understand the moral of it, sir and I will try to apply it."

JOHN CHINAMAN IN HIS SPHERE

THE HERO OF THE FRESH PATCHES—AN OC[CU]PATION FOR [illegible] IN WHICH HE DOES [illegible] [illegible] ANY WHITE MAN [illegible]

From [illegible] Reporter

Whatever may be said of the "Heat[hen] Chinese" on general principles as a c[illegible] and a ruination to the country, it must be [illegible] that they are making a wonde[rful] change in this section—a change which would be idle to think of were it not for [illegible] Chinamen Thousands of acres in the [illegible] hill valley are in cultivation this year wh[ich] were covered with growths of wood a [illegible] months ago and next year the clearing [illegible] be increased [illegible] The Chinamen [illegible] doing it. The cost of this class of labor is [illegible] half what it would be with white m[en] [illegible] and owners are [illegible] [illegible] could not afford to [illegible] larger prices The Chinamen clear land [illegible] from $9 to $2[illegible] per acre and board themsel[ves] This is getting down to a most abject sc[ale] of hire and is pronounced starvati[on] wages for any [illegible] but Chinamen General[ly] considered such servitude looks contemp[tible] low and despicable but looking at this c[illegible] in its true light there is room for modifi[ca]tion. The facts show this Not more th[an] one white laborer in half a dozen will g[o] and at any price and when they unders[tand] [illegible] they demand wages equal to that of [illegible] chance and [illegible] only now and then we [illegible] a land owner able to pay such prices [illegible] consequence has been that the largest port[ion] of our lands lay [illegible] and a dead we[ight] to its possessors of no benefit to them [illegible] anybody else. Bringing this land into [illegible] market of industry necessarily increases w[ork] the sort which white men have so far [illegible] [illegible] and throws employme[nt] into their hands after the Chinamen ha[ve] [illegible] the dirty work. SATURDAY MORNING JUNE 29, 1878

COMMUNISM

The following expression from the French communists in New York, who seem to take pride in the open declaration of radical [illegible] will give an idea of what seems to be [illegible] that is now misguiding a large [illegible] of the discontented classes

We are communists because we desire the [illegible] distribution of wealth and work among [illegible], and that the power to possess should [illegible] belong to a few but to all—to the [illegible]

We are communists because we desire to [illegible] by this individual property personified [illegible] and iniquity because we wish to [illegible] overthrown society a bond of hap[illegible] and perfect equality among men [illegible] communism is the clearest affirmation of [illegible] revolution and the last stage of human [illegible]

[illegible] repudiate all doctrines which aim [illegible] taxes on the fortunes, the privileges [illegible] revenues of the rich because this [illegible] tend to consecrate in the bosom of hu[illegible] inequalities which it is our hope to [illegible]

We are atheists, because, consequent with [illegible], our logic refuses to admit a Su[illegible] Being a chimera—something in [illegible] outside humanity [illegible] this error from which has flowed [illegible] all flows the degradation the enslave[illegible] and martyrdom of mankind, because it [illegible] the name of this imaginary creature that [illegible] atrocities have been committed [illegible] without number—and which have [illegible] progress and science [illegible] new society—that to which the [illegible] of the world has been promised, that [illegible] must regenerate the races that which [illegible] us free—we do not recognize God [illegible] not have the God in whose name so [illegible] crimes have been committed so much [illegible] shed.

[illegible] rid of this phantom of our mi[illegible] [illegible] look at the reality science and [illegible] shall I be saved

We are revolutionists because only by [illegible] of revolution can we hope for victo[illegible] [illegible] we wish to gain our ends without [illegible] at half measures or for new delays [illegible] but a prolonging of the actual state [illegible] and an adjournment of the con[illegible]

[illegible] revolutionists because we desire to [illegible] by force a society which upholds [illegible] by force Because we know that we [illegible] conquer at whatever price political [illegible] which alone can establish the dicta[illegible] the proletariat and force it to act until [illegible] shall only be equal citizens in the new [illegible]

[illegible] army of the revolution the most [illegible] means to employ for the complete [illegible] of the bourgeoisie—the bes[illegible] defense against the aggressions and [illegible] of its servants—are reprisals the [illegible] immolation of all our enemies th[illegible] of their palaces and their proper[illegible] to overthrow their temples those [illegible] which recall human slavery the [illegible] of the people and the reign of the [illegible] and the bloody opopees of the sol[illegible] of the empire.

[illegible] the last priest will disappear the last [illegible] of stupidity and error With the last [illegible] will disappear the last vestige of the [illegible] of labor, the last vestige of op[illegible] and misery. The moment draws [illegible] when events will bring us the occasion [illegible] in the last struggle and definite [illegible]

[illegible] nature and probable tendency of [illegible] doctrines the San Francisco Bullet[illegible]

[illegible] can hardly be said that communism in [illegible] country has reached such a stage of de[illegible] as that represented in the forego[illegible] declarations. The foreigner as a socialist [illegible] advanced It was noticed at the sand [illegible] meetings last winter that by far the most [illegible] utterances were those of foreigners [illegible] of the distribution of prop[illegible] this is a foreign one It is the poison [illegible] radical communism working out the [illegible] here, only the time has not yet [illegible] make so emphatic a declaration [illegible] The socialist here is hardly yet [illegible] that name. He has a vague belief [illegible] to be a radical revolution—an [illegible] which shall result in great ad[illegible] to those who are without tan[illegible] property. The leveling doctrine is one [illegible] accepts as a proper adjustment [illegible] survival of the fittest, the greater pros[illegible] of the more prudent, temperate and [illegible] is abhorrent to him The com[illegible] does not care to have it said openly [illegible] the enemy of God and society, and [illegible] proposes to abolish both Yet the [illegible] advanced French communists are ready [illegible] avow that doctrine The novitiate [illegible] socialism goes on step by step [illegible] article of his creed is war on the ex[illegible] order of things. There is nothing [illegible] in property rights His read[illegible] would banish God, religion and all [illegible] of property. The mere tyro [illegible] prepared to go as far as this at present [illegible] undeveloped reformer finding his [illegible] stimulants in sand lot meetings and [illegible] revolutionary talk.

THE CHINAMAN IN HIS SPHERE

[illegible] THE BRUSH PATCHES—AN OCCU[illegible] FOR JOHN IN WHICH HE DOESN'T [illegible] WITH ANY WHITE MAN AND [illegible] HIS COUNTRY WELL

From the Yamhill Reporter

[illegible] may be said of the "Heathen [illegible]" on general principles, as a curse [illegible] to the country, it must be ad[illegible] that they are making a wonderful [illegible] in this section—a change which it [illegible] to think of were it not for the [illegible] Thousands of acres in the Yam[illegible] [illegible] cultivation this year which [illegible] with growths of wood a few [illegible] and next year the clearing will [illegible] over this. The Chinamen are [illegible] The cost of this class of labor is less [illegible] what it would be with white men [illegible] many small land owners are availing [illegible] of it, who could not afford to pay [illegible] The Chinamen clear land at [illegible] per acre and board themselves [illegible] down to a most abject scale [illegible] its pronounced starvation [illegible] anybody but Chinamen Generally [illegible] such servitude looks contempti[illegible] despicable, but looking at this case [illegible] light, there is room for modifica[illegible] The facts show this Not more than [illegible] laborer in half a dozen will grub [illegible] any price, and when they undertake [illegible] demand wages equal to that of me[illegible] and it is only now and then we find [illegible] able to pay such prices The [illegible] has been that the largest portion [illegible] have lain idle and a dead weight [illegible] of no benefit to them or [illegible] Bringing this land into the [illegible] necessarily increases work [illegible] which white men have so far re[illegible] control of, and throws employment [illegible] after the Chinamen have [illegible] dirty work." In this light the in[illegible] and considerate man has not so [illegible] complain of on the subject of Chi[illegible] labor, after all.

[illegible] Kind of a Tilden Defense

(From the Boston Herald)

[illegible] the Republicans allege, that [illegible] Democratic managers in the cam[illegible] did attempt to buy up a Repub[illegible] in Oregon, and thus prevent the [illegible] of Mr. Hayes. But it is also true [illegible] fraud was attempted anywhere [illegible] until after the Republicans [illegible] accomplished the frauds in Florida [illegible] by which the votes of those [illegible] declared for Hayes. If it be ad[illegible] that the attempt in Oregon was as bad as the accomplishment in Florida and Louisiana it must be admitted [illegible] that any Democratic fraud would ever have been undertaken if the result of the election had not first been reversed by Republican fraud

THE HABITS OF THE PHONOGRAPH

[illegible]

From the Chicago [illegible]

The phonograph has a [illegible] [illegible] through the large lenses [illegible] [illegible] the octave where [illegible] [illegible] its tendency is to flat but [illegible] [illegible] a whistle or the sound of a [illegible] it will reproduce with admirable fidelity. Probably a violin tone if it could be forced into the funnel so as to strike the diaphragm, would be absolutely reproduced both in quantity and quality of tone. Its reproduction of a pure tone is best shown in the case of a whistle. Suppose that the ordinary tones of speech, singing, laughing and coughing have been indented upon the foil then whistle over the same surface and reverse the phonograph. The speech, singing, laughing and coughing will be reproduced in a confused din while the whistle will be heard through it all perfectly clear and distinct. The phonograph has some odd preferences. It likes what is bizarre and out of the common. It will give back imitations of animals such as the cackling of hens, crowing of roosters, lowing of cows, barking of dogs and mewing of cats more faithfully than it will the ordinary utterances that make human speech. It has not yet succeeded in reproducing the qualities perfectly that distinguish one voice from another except that it indicates very clearly the distinctions of the male and female voice but it must be remembered that the phonograph is yet an infant and that the instruments now on exhibition are those which Mr Edison's fertile genius first suggested and only illustrate the principle of vibration. His improvements are already so far advanced that its power is greatly increased and there can be no doubt that he will not only greatly intensify the tone but will reproduce its different qualities while the application of clock work to the revolutions of the cylinder will secure a uniformity of speed that cannot be obtained by the hand and will thus pitch the sounds up in the natural key and retain that pitch. When that is done music may be reproduced as correctly by the phonograph as the face is by the photograph

BEAUTY:

OR, THE

Secret of a Fair Face.

An Item of Interest to Every Lady who Desires to be More Beautiful than she now is.

Unfortunately not one woman in a hundred subjected to the whims of an American climate possesses that basis and starting point of real beauty—a pure and clear complexion What nature has thus denied, art must be called upon to furnish It can be done, it is done daily. Prof W. E. Hagan placed beauty within the reach of every unblessed daughter of Eve when he discovered that surprising article known in fashionable circles as the true secret of beauty, and called

MAGNOLIA BALM

The MAGNOLIA BALM is a sure device for creating a pure and blooming complexion. It conceals all natural blemishes in the most surprising and effective manner It removes all roughness, eruptions, redness, blotches, freckles, and tan with magical power. It drives away all evidence of fatigue and excitement. It makes the plainest face beautiful. It gives the complexion a dazzling purity and makes the neck, face [illegible] appear graceful, rotund and plump. [illegible] of 35 or 40 look not more than 2[illegible] years old and changes the rustic maiden into a cultivated city belle.

The Magnolia Balm removes all blemishes and conceals every drawback to beauty, and, while it is as harmless as water, [illegible] so life-like in its effects that the closest observer cannot detect its use. Ladies who want to make themselves attractive can make an absolute certainty of it by using HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM and we know of no other way. It is the cheapest preparation in the world all things considered and may be had at any drug store

SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 29, 1878.

THE INDIAN WAR—CAN IT BE STOPPED?

We are in the midst of an Indian war. It has signs of being more extensive, costly and bloody than any of the past wars with them. This arises from the fact that the treaty Indians, the peaceable and industrious, as well as the non-treaty, idle and nomadic, have come to believe that the government does not mean to keep its faith with them, or to redeem its treaty pledges to give them titles to their allotments of farms on their reservations. They learn that congress and the commissioner of Indian affairs propose to force them from their homes to new, strange and rugged reservations, or to mass them on one or two large reservations.

THEIR FARMS ARE THEIR HOMES.

Many of them have made small farms, built houses, bought agricultural implements and stock and other means of comfort. All these have cost them much labor. They love and cling to their homes as we do to ours.

CAUSE OF WAR.

They know that the war with the Nez Perce chief, Joseph and his band last year, arose from this purpose to force him and his band away from their own never-sold lands in the Wallowa valley, and drive them on the Nez Perce reservation. This was felt by many to be unjust in principle and impolitic in practice. Those Indians felt it more keenly. All the tribes sympathized with them. Runners have passed from tribe to tribe during twelve or fifteen months past, discussing their grievances among themselves, and trying to bring all to a common purpose not to go to the new reservations, and not to give up their homes. The result is that a general distrust of the word of the whites and the honor of our government prevails among them all. They will not furnish General Howard with scouts for this war. They wait the turn of events. They will if pressed fight and die in defense of their homes.

AN INJUSTICE TO THE INDIAN GIVES HIM GREAT POWER.

Treat any man unfairly and you put a mighty weapon in his hand that will smite yourself. The avenging Nemesis will find and punish the guilty. Word has come that a white man has filed on the farm of Charley a Nez Perce, of Timothy's band at Alpowai who was also a faithful scout under General Howard last year. The white man alleges that the Indian has not taken his land exactly according to the forms of law. But we know that the law giving Indians homesteads off the reservations was not passed until March 3, 1875, and that these Indians have lived as citizens several years at Alpowai, and that their rights began as citizens with their occupancy of the claim, either by pre-emption or homestead. They can and must hold in chancery these homes in which they have lived ten or fifteen years. It will be a fine opportunity for a generous minded attorney to go into court and defend the case and secure the rights of this faithful scout.

The general land commissioner ordered the farms of those Indians to be kept for them. The Coeur d'Alenes, whose farms are probably on unsurveyed lands, will doubtless present similar cases in equity. Meanwhile the attempt of white men to jump that Indian claim will be like a lighted match to powder. It will destroy the faith in us of the best Indians, our long time friends. It will fire their hate and expose the guilty and innocent alike to revenge. Such a deed published among the other tribes will incite them to deeds of blood. The meanness of the act will arouse sympathy for the Indian, who is striving to do all his duty as a citizen. Every one of that band last year gave their property under oath to the assessor to pay their taxes. How base the deed that would strike an Indian down and cast a firebrand into the homes of the settlers!

The injustice of withholding titles to homesteads on the reservations, of not securing to the Indian his home in law, causes the same peril to communities on the frontier. In fact there is no safety to any man, white or black or copper colored, except under the protection of law. This flag of law, instead of war, ought to have been thrown over the Indian long ago. The cost and difficulty of doing it now, and of turning him from war, will be great; yet it must be done, and that soon, or the next offer of the Sibylline leaves of wisdom will come with added losses and costs.

EXTENT OF THE DISTURBANCE.

General Howard said to me the day before the outbreak of the Bannacks: "I expect a war at any moment. I have been in constant communication with Gens. McDowell and Sherman for several weeks. The ferment is widespread. It is among many once quiet tribes. It seems to extend across the continent."

Understanding that titles to Indian homesteads on the reservations had been pledged them by treaties, and that they had long desired these titles, and that they knew the recent plan to move them to new reservations, and that they would not go unless forced to do it, but would be quiet and friendly if the patents are given them; Gen. Howard, in view of these facts sent a telegram to the president, asking him to issue those patents at once as a war measure. No reply has come. Meanwhile the war has begun with its usual murders, raids, uncertain movements, alarms, vexatious suspense, costly traversing to and fro by long marches and slow trains over the arid plains of the interior, 300 miles away southeast of the headquarters of the department of the Columbia, on whom the responsibility has again fallen to quell the disturbances.

Distrust of the whites and the government turns friendly Indians to foes. Telegrams to-day give signs that the Umatillas, the Warm Springs and Klamaths are hostile. Gen. Howard strives to prevent the union of those now at war, with those on the reservations.

The duty of the hour is to redeem every pledge and win back their faith to the government. The president and the commissioner of Indian affairs can do this by fulfilling the treaties. Messages ought to rouse both to prompt action. Life, property and the welfare of the frontier settlements are at stake.

When this is over and quiet restored, not the war policy or the peace policy, but the citizens policy should be enforced.

G. H. ATKINSON.

THE INSANE ASYLUM AT STEILACOOM.

STEILACOOM, June 28, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

There are no doubt many of your readers who are unacquainted with this excellent institution, and who will thank you for calling their attention to it.

The hospital occupies what was at one time a government post; and though the present buildings are not in every respect what could be wished for such an institution, and not what the territory intends they shall be, in time, they are certainly made to answer well their present purpose. The site is a beautiful and healthy one, on the prairie near Steilacoom, and near a deep ravine through which runs an inexhaustible water supply. The water is raised by rams to a reservoir on the institution grounds, and is used for sanitary as well as culinary purposes. A more beautiful, dry and healthful site could not well have been selected. The prairie, which forms a large part of the country, is covered with grass, with clumps of fir and oak trees; and near by are several fine lakes. On one of these Captain Ainsworth, of Portland, has a summer residence. One of the finest views of Mt. Rainier is obtained from the hospital grounds and buildings.

About two years ago the territorial council agreed to change the working plan of the institution. It had been carried on by contract. It is now under the control of the territory, with a board of trustees nominated by the governor and confirmed by the council. In many ways this seems to be an improvement on the contract principle. The present board consists of Gen. P. L. McKenny, of Olympia, Mr. M. S. Booth, of Seattle, and Mr. George E. Kandle, of Steilacoom. The board meets, I believe, every month.

The present resident superintendent is Dr. Rufus Willard, a large-hearted and thoroughly capable gentleman, who resides with his family on the grounds. Dr. Willard has for years made a specialty of nervous and cerebral diseases, and is therefore the man in the right place. The institution ought to have a good, suitable library for the use of the resident physician, [illegible] books as he needs and books which the general practitioner does not need and [illegible]. No doubt the trustees will in time procure such a library, as the need is seen and acknowledged by all.

The general superintendent is Major A. H. Allen, a gentleman of culture and refinement, and such qualities of head and heart as fit him peculiarly for his work. He is helped in many ways by his estimable and accomplished wife. The major is always kind and courteous, and Mrs. Allen has always a cheerful and encouraging word for the poor unfortunates. I had the pleasure of examining the superintendent's system of bookkeeping—a system partly or entirely devised by himself. Nothing could be clearer or better. He is able to tell at a glance everything that has been bought, every pound of provision that has been used, and exactly what is at present on hand. Under such a system there can be no careless handling of the public goods.

There are now in the hospital 72 patients—59 men and 13 women. It is a sad sight, truly, to see these poor creatures in their several wards. There are different degrees and kinds of insanity among them, from the quiet and entirely harmless, to the noisy and dangerous. One poor man goes through a series of bowings and devotional exercises, several times a day, to imaginary spirits. It is painful to witness his gestures at these times. They all have their native notions, and sometimes they are queer and laughable. One man imagines himself a very great person, whom some one else is keeping from his proper place in the white house, or at least in the senate. Another has most wonderful stories to tell of the effects of electricity on himself. If it were not for the kindness shown to them,—the care which shows itself everywhere for their good in neat and clean beds, white and sanded floors, whitewashed walls, and good food,—it would make one's heart ache, indeed, to see them. We thank God that every Christian state acknowledges its duty to provide for those whom reason has left, and left so desolate.

While there will be in time several needed changes made in the hospital, in the management of its surroundings, we can heartily speak of it as a model institution of its kind and hope that even more interest will be taken in it by the Christian public.

THE LINCOLN ASSASSINATION.

CONTENTS OF THE MISSING STATEMENT OF THE ROMANTIC-MINDED MURDERER, BOOTH—THE TRAGEDY NOT CONTEMPLATED PRIOR TO THE DAY OF ITS EXECUTION.

[Baltimore Special, 13th, to Chicago Times.]

In an interview with a reporter John T. Ford, who was manager of Ford's Opera House in Washington when Booth assassinated Lincoln, made his first statement in connection with the tragedy. Mr. Ford said John Wilkes Booth was trained from earliest infancy to consider the almost deified assassin Brutus just as Shakspeare immortalized him. His father was named Junius Brutus, and his brother is now the bearer of that same name. The great actor frequently appeared in the play "Julius Cæsar," and not later than 1864 three of his sons acted the three leading characters of the play to an audience that applauded the sentiments of Brutus to the echo. Now trace the assassination of Lincoln. On the morning of April 14, 1865, Booth, who had conspired for six months previous to abduct President Lincoln and convey him a prisoner to the south, was the last guest at breakfast at the National Hotel in Washington. The surrender at Appomattox had ended all chance for him to carry out his original conspiracy. He left the hotel after 11 o'clock that morning, and walked up Sixth street to and stopped at the Surratt House, where he met the widow who kept it returning from the religious services on Good Friday, and then in the act of going to her farm or country place, the vehicle to convey her being already at the door, to collect some money due her, so as to pay what was due by her to the Calvert estate. Booth, when informed of her intended visit, requested her to take some articles belonging to him that he had left at the country tavern, and then, bidding her adieu, he walked up the street to Tenth, and down Tenth to the theater. When he reached there it was about, or probably a little later, than 12 o'clock midday. There he heard for the first time that both President Lincoln and Gen. Grant were to visit the theater that night. The private box was in process of decoration, and the White House messenger had been there an hour before to procure its use. I believe, and all that is written or oral testimony confirms that belief, that then and there the terrible thought of assassination first suggested itself. It came like this: "If I failed to serve the south in my conspiracy to abduct, I can now be her Brutus." This thought fastened on his brain, led him to go from the theatre toward the Kirkwood to have a conference with some of his old conspirators. Surratt was away; O'Laughlin was in Baltimore, and Arnold was in a sutler's store at Fortress Monroe. They knew the abduction conspiracy had been abandoned, but Payne, Atzerodt and Harrold were in Washington. These latter he got together, and conspired with them to kill the president, the victorious general, and some of the cabinet. He must have written between the time when he parted with his conspirators and the hour he again appeared at the theater a lengthy statement for publication excusing his intended crime by Roman precedent. When dying he referred to it for his justification. He gave, on the evening of the 14th, a package to an actor, directing its delivery next day to the National Intelligencer. The actor confesses that he, frightened at the risk he ran, broke the seal, read the enclosed matter, and at midnight burned it. If that package had been preserved it would have revealed the declaration that until noon that day its writer had not premeditated murder, but, feeling deeply the humiliation of the south, to the people of which he bore all the love that Brutus felt for Rome, he would strike down that night the leading men of the victorious hosts, who were shouting the pæan of triumph. When dying, with his face lit up with the blaze of the burning barn upon the Garrett farm, just at the break of day on the morning of April 24, he muttered some words. A soldier bent over him and caught them from his fast-ebbing breath, first a message for his mother: "Tell her I did it, as I thought, for the best;" and then he said: "Tell others that the communication I wrote addressed to the National Intelligencer will explain why I did what I did." During the conspiracy trial at the arsenal, Joseph Holt, the judge advocate, called John A. Coyle, then the publisher of the National Intelligencer, and asked if that communication had ever been received. His reply was, "No." It was, continued Mr. Ford, burnt in the grate of a chamber of a boarding house, and a Catholic priest now living in Washington, had the fact confessed to him soon afterward. I had the occurrence related to me, with the added information of the confession, by the party who was the custodian of the package. This fully sustains my theory that John Wilkes Booth had not contemplated the assassination of President Lincoln when he met Mrs. Surratt at midday, and he never met her again.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Don Cameron has been defeated in another county convention in Pennsylvania; Union county nominates a senator and representative outspoken against him.

Ex-Gov. Hendricks, who is in Washington, speaks in unfavorable terms of the Potter committee and their proceedings. Governor Hendricks prefers Grant's nomination in 1880.

A bail of pop-corn lies in the British Museum in London with a label on it reading as follows: "An article of food in America, greatly liked by the negroes in the southern United States."

The department of the south and of the gulf are consolidated under the name of the department of the south, Brigadier General C. C. Augur commanding, to take effect on the 1st of July.

United States Senator Bruce (colored) of Mississippi, was married in Cleveland, June 24. The bride was Miss Josephine Wilson. Only a few colored people were present. The party has gone to Europe.

The Inter-Ocean exposes the great corporations of Chicago, who manage to make respectable incomes off legal fees and illegal perquisites, not to say bribes. A kindred evil in all large cities invites investigation.

The rush of Americans for Europe continues unabated. The steamships are crowded with people bound for the Paris exhibition. It is estimated that over $20,000,000 will be spent in Europe this year by Americans.

Some of the Republican clerks at Washington who have been invited by the Republican committee to contribute to the campaign fund reply that they have "pooled off" on the question with their fellow Democratic clerks.

The total of delegates elected to the constitutional convention in California is as follows: Non-partisan, 85; Workingmen, 50; Republicans, 9; Democrats, 8. The non-partisan majority on delegates at large is 2,500.

The late Owen Healey made nearly $100,000 by keeping a drinking saloon on Cherry street, New York. He was a prodigious eater, and often made a midnight lunch by eating out an oyster stand. He died at the age of 60, and weighed over 500 pounds.

Secretary Sherman says he felt much interested in the Potter investigation, while it was revolutionary in character, but now, that its only object seems to discover whether Anderson swore falsely in his protest or swore falsely now, and whether the name of one of the Louisiana electors was signed without his authority to an unnecessary and invalid supplemental return, is not important enough to pay its cost.

NOTES AND GOSSIP.

In 1850 Commodore Vanderbilt said he knew that his property would count up $100,000.

New York Tribune: There isn't much left of Alexander Stephens, but most of what there is seems to be backbone.

There is a painful rumor lurking in the air that Anderson is about to leave us to assume the management of the fund in Texas.

One session of Stanley Matthews' special committee is said to have been enough to satisfy the members that Matthews is guileless, but ironically green.

The Ohio convention indorsed Hayes as a matter of routine duty, but when the name of General Grant was mentioned there was a spontaneous yell that came from the heart.

Mr. Yung Wing, the Chinese commissioner, has presented to Yale, from which college he is a graduate, a large collection of Chinese books. The 1,200 volumes are historical, poetical, etc.

A curious antique silver watch, said to have once been the property of President Washington, is owned by a family in Ottawa, Kansas. It carries the initials "G. W." and was once owned by General Lewis Cass.

The tercentenary of Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, has just been commemorated by the Royal College of Physicians. Professor Huxley made a speech at the banquet exceedingly eulogistic of Harvey.

A painting by Paul Veronese, once the altar piece of the chapel of St. Helena at Venice, has been purchased for the National Academy, London. The price paid was over $5,000. One of the critics complains that the collection is weak where it ought to be strong—in English pictures—and that a good Hogarth might have been secured for a third of the sum paid for "The Invention of the Cross."

INSIDE HISTORY.

GEN. CHARLES GROSVENOR REVEALS SOME PRESIDENTIAL SECRETS—CONKLING'S PROPOSITION TO HAYES, WHICH WAS REJECTED.

General Charles Grosvenor, of Ohio, in an interview with a reporter of the Cincinnati Commercial, gives a few interesting points from his own knowledge on Hayes' cabinet-making and kindred subjects. Gen. Grosvenor says:

When I was speaker of the house and Mr. Hayes was governor of Ohio, I used to make a practice of going every day about noon to see and consult with him. About the middle of February, not later, at least, than the 15th of that month, I arrived in Columbus after an absence of several days. I went to Gov. Hayes and said to him:

"I am at least able to say to you that I am confident you are to be the next president, and, in that light congratulate you." I said: "Have you done anything towards making up your cabinet?"

He answered: "I have not. I have not yet decided upon a single man for the cabinet in the event of my choice for the office."

I then said to him, "Do you know anything about Judge Key?"

He said he did not know anything particularly about him. I then told Gov. Hayes that I had lived six months in Judge Key's house, in Chattanooga, Tenn. The circumstances of my occupancy of his house did not conduce to any acquaintance with Judge Key personally, for he was away in the confederate army, but I had learned that he was loved, respected, and, indeed, fairly reverenced by the people, and I thought the choice of him for a cabinet position would be a wise one and calculated to do good. He was held in the highest estimation by the community, as an honorable, honest and able lawyer, and a square, solid person in every respect. This I tell you to show that Gov. Hayes had the appointment of Judge Key to the cabinet position under consideration at least two weeks before the reception of the Boulds Baker dispatch. On another day, near the close of February, or after the middle—I am sure it was after the middle of the month, I said again to Governor Hayes: "Governor, what do you think of the Washington rumors brought back by Gov. Sherwood, to the effect that Mr. Conkling will antagonize the Republican position and endeavor to turn over the vote of Louisiana to the Democrats, or influence in favor of Tilden the decision of the electoral commission?"

Gov. Hayes replied: "I have a proposition from New York, coming from a gentleman in Albany, to the effect that the antagonism of Conkling could be counteracted, and his countenance and assistance secured, provided that I would in making up a cabinet, ignore the claims of Mr. Morton, and deny his requests. This proposition was coupled with an intimation that if I failed to ignore and snub Mr. Morton, I could count upon the opposition of Mr. Conkling and his influence in deciding the vote of the electoral commission against me. I was given plainly to understand that if I did not comply with this demand of Mr. Conkling, I must expect the hostility of that gentleman."

I asked Gov. Hayes if he complied with the demand, and he answered:

"I would rather never be president than to commit myself to a position hostile to Mr. Morton. I do not think it proper for me to commit myself now in any direction, and the last act of my life would be to place myself in a position inimical to Morton. Never has the Republican outlook been so dark and gloomy in Ohio that Mr. Morton has not come to our aid and assistance, and with words of cheer and comfort. He has always in the darkest days been our relief and our counselor, and the man in our party who would for purely private reasons, antagonize Mr. Morton and endeavor to injure his influence, would be unworthy of the confidence of the Republican party of the west."

LIVERPOOL, June 28.—A leading grain circular says with bright mowing weather the wheat trade has been inactive this week, with prices slowly tending in favor of buyers. On spot and at distant market business in wheat since Tuesday has been limited but values are nominally unsettled. For maize, which is now obtainable at a rate lower than known since the article came into general consumption, the demand is good and promises to be most extensive. Thus far sales for forward delivery are continually practicable to a fair extent at higher than current spot prices. At this market to-day there was an unusually small attendance. The demand for wheat was limited, and wherever sales were pressed a reduction of two pence per cental from Tuesday's prices was necessary. Flour very unsalable and value decidedly in favor of buyers. Corn in good request at last quotations.
